Origin of The 'Forgotten Man'

1956 is to be an election year. If we must have a text, let it be: "The Dilemma of the GOP."

Let us turn to an old, but timeless story. In a lecture delivered at Yale more than half a century ago, Professor William Graham Sumner said:

"Wealth comes only from production, and all that the wrangling grabbers, loafers and robbers get to deal with comes from somebody's toil and sacrifice. Who, then, is he who provides it all? Go and find him, and you will have once more before you the 'Forgotten Man.'"

"You will find him hard at work because he has a great many to support. . . . The Forgotten Man is delving away in patient industry, supporting his family, paying his taxes, casting his vote, supporting the church and school, reading his newspaper and cheering for the politician of his admiration, but he is the only one for whom there is no provision in the great scramble and the big divide. . . .

"Such is The Forgotten Man. He works, he votes, generally he prays — but always he prays — yes, above all he prays."

Other men in succeeding years had used that phrase. "The Forgotten Man." It remained for Franklin D. Roosevelt to give it permanent place in our vocabulary, our annals of politics, and the science thereof.

Climax

Historians, and intelligent observers have since noted these facts:

The financial crash came in 1929. But the precipitous rush toward a climax of its social effects did not come to be apparent until 1931. They worsened in 1932 and by 1933 could be said to have attained full climax.

Those who wish to understand history, and the result of events, will be honest enough to admit that the results of the depression were not possible of full comprehension when the Democratic platform was written in the summer of 1932.

The so-called New Deal measures were not then fully in anyone's mind, including that of Mr. Roosevelt, though the evidences of depression were grim and tragic enough to start him, and others, thinking.

Today, for example, there is a frantic group, such as that which supported Sen. Joe McCarthy, which argues the Deal formula was conceived by a calculating left-wing cult which "surrounded" Mr. Roosevelt.

The truth is that no element of Big Business in 1932 opposed the measures so hastily formulated. To this day the most virulent opponents do not dare condemn the New Deal measures.

The fact is, plainly to be seen as we approach the 1956 elections, that "The Forgotten Man" is going to decide the results in November 1956—as he did in 1932, and in every election to our time, INCLUDING THAT OF 1952.

Identity

We call it the "Independent vote."

Actually it is "The Forgotten Man," as defined by Professor Sumner.

It was "The Forgotten Man" who elected Mr. Eisenhower in 1952.

The submerged, average man, farmer or city dweller, caught in an industrial civilization, began to think that he had been forgotten.

He was the basis of Franklin D. Roosevelt's strength.

In 1952 he began to feel the Democrats, 20 years in office, had forgotten him.

Even so, he was careful not really to put much confidence in the Republican party, for all its glib promises. He gave Mr. Eisenhower a tremendous victory. Yet, he voted the Republican party into control only by a margin of two members of the Senate, one of whom could not stomach the result. In 1954 the Forgotten Man, voted the Democrats back in charge of the Congress.

It should not be overlooked that not until 1954 was Mr. Eisenhower able to function.

Today the Forgotten Man seems to be saying the Republicans have become captive of special privilege and once more forgot the "Forgotten Man."

That is the political background for 1956, now so close upon us.

CRIPPLED ATLANTA GIRL TO WED AIR FORCE SERGEANT
Jeanette Hulsey and Sgt. Bill Hendricks Read Christmas Card

FIANCEE NEEDS HIM HERE

Transfer Is Canceled So Airman Can Wed

By KATHERINE BARNWELL

A severely crippled young Atlanta woman and an Air Force sergeant are happily making plans to be married here Jan. 13—thanks to a "Christmas present" from the military.

A.I.C. Bill Hendricks, who's stationed at Dobbins Air Force Base, was scheduled to go overseas in February.

But he wanted to marry Miss Jeanette Hulsey of 194 Hunnicutt St., N.W.—and she needed him here because she is bedridden and almost blind. She has been a victim of rheumatoid arthritis since childhood.

When Army and Air Force officers heard their story, they notified him he would not be sent overseas for at least a year.

"It's about the best Christmas present I could have," Airman Hendricks said Friday.

Then he turned to dark-haired Jeanette, who was smiling at him from her bed, and added simply: "She is my BEST Christmas present!"

MARTIN'S LETTER
Harold Martin, Atlanta Constitution columnist, was instrumental in getting Jeanette's fiancé removed from the overseas list. Martin, long-time friend of the crippled girl, wrote a three-page letter about Jeanette and her airman to Lt. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, Third Army commander.

Martin told the general that the story of Jeanette and Airman Hendricks is "one of the most touching of our time."

"Miss Hulsey is a hopeless cripple," Martin wrote. "She also is nearly blind. Bill Hendricks is her eyes, her hands, her feet. He spends all his off-duty hours with her."

STRONGEST LINK
"He waits on her as gently as a mother. He feeds her, and brings her water, reads to her, carries her in his arms to his car and drives her out on warm days in fall and spring. He carries her to church and to the doctors. . . .

"He is in my considered opinion the strongest link between the crippled and the able-bodied."

Rockefeller Resigns as Aide to Ike

By EDWIN L. DALE JR.

The New York Times News Service GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 19—President Eisenhower today accepted the resignation of Nelson A. Rockefeller as one of his special assistants, effective Dec. 31.

Rockefeller was the White House staff officer charged with the broad area of "psychological strategy." He was concerned with the impact abroad of various United States actions and proposals, ranging from foreign aid to the atomic "peace ship."

The President, in accepting the resignation, warmly praised Rockefeller for his "devoted services." He said Rockefeller had "effectively assisted" in the increase of "understanding and cooperation among all peoples," which the President described as essential for attainment of "the potential that exists in the world for human advancement."

Rockefeller's letter of resignation pointed out that Ike had known since the end of summer of the "compelling personal responsibilities" which induced him to resign.

These relate to Rockefeller family affairs, according to White House Press Secretary Hagerty. Rockefeller is a grandson of the late John D. Rockefeller.

Rockefeller's intermittent government service dates back to 1940.

Forrest Turner Plays Santa at State Prisons

By KEELER MCCARTNEY

Forrest Turner is going back to prison. However, this time there are no iron shackles and heavily armed guards. The one-time "bad boy" of the state penal system is a welcome guest.

He's managed to obtain a Christmas present for each of the more than 6,000 men and women who are serving time in Georgia prisons. And he's delivering most of the gifts in person.

In the more remote camps, Turner has mailed gift packages to the wardens and asked that the packages be distributed in his name.

Turner, now an employee of an Atlanta manufacturing concern, got the idea for the Santa Claus mission many years ago while confined to a solitary confinement cell in north Georgia.

"It was before the prison reform program in Georgia," Turner said. "I'd been in all the bad prisons in the state and a few of the good ones."

Impressed by Turner's 11 rapid-fire escapes from various prison branches, the warden ordered him placed in solitary on bread and water over the holidays.

On Christmas Day, an elderly Negro prisoner who was a trusty in the camp, managed to slip undetected into the solitary cell block. He gave Turner a small package of raisins, a stick of candy and a cigar which he had saved out of his own meager gifts.

"Those were the best raisins and candy any man ever ate," Turner laughed.

Turner, who has never smoked, found a different problem in the cigar. He was held in a steel and cement cell, with no windows and no running water. There was no easy means of disposing of the cigar.

"I thought about chewing it up and swallowing it," he said. "But I knew that would make me sick and the prison authorities would know I had managed to get something."

"I knew if they caught the man who had been near my cell he'd be in for a lot of trouble."

"So, I spent most of Christmas Day grinding the cigar into dust with my shoes and then blowing the dust around so it wouldn't be noticed."

"I've never been able to forget those I left behind," Turner said.

State Heads For Record Prosperity

Business, Farms Show Big Gains

By BOB SIBLEY

Georgia business experienced the highest level of prosperity in history during the first nine months of 1955.

And, despite the March freeze that wiped out the peach and pecan crops, Georgia's farm income jumped $13.9 million during the first eight months.

Particularly encouraging was a 28.2 per cent increase in the number of new businesses incorporated in Georgia in the January-September period.

1,593 NEW BUSINESSES

Figures released Monday by Merrill C. Lofton, U.S. Department of Commerce field manager in Atlanta, showed 1,593 new businesses this year compared with 1,243 in the like 1954 period.

Georgia farmers received $356,549,000 for their products—a 4.1 per cent increase—with gains showing in both crop and livestock sales. Only three states in the seven-state Southeastern area reported a favorable agricultural picture.

Deposits in Federal Reserve member banks rose $72,300,000 to $1,503,900,000, while checking accounts climbed from $16,012,700,000 to $18,118,300,000.

FEWER UNEMPLOYED

The employment picture looked much better, with 10,000 fewer persons drawing unemployment compensation.

The number of industrial workers rose 16,800 to 322,400, while contract construction employment increased 10,700 to 57,300.

Consumption of electrical power by utilities and industrial establishments totaled 6,779,715,000 kilowatt hours—an 827,542,000-kilowatt-hour increase.

The value of Georgia construction was up $7,000,000 to $195,500,000, with the number of new dwelling units increasing 500 to 14,662.

At Columbus, a phenomenal 1.156 per cent gain in new units was reflected, with the total jumping from 124 authorized last year to 1,683 this year. Atlanta permits rose 432 units to 8,698.

The value of world trade through the state's ports of Savannah, Brunswick and Atlanta increased $1,900,000 to $94,900,000 this year.

Both wholesale and retail trade

"COME BEHOLD HIM, BORN THE KING OF ANGELS"
Danny Cothran, 5, Moves in for a Closer Look at the Babe

Yule Spirit in a Manger Comes to Pickett's Alley

"Jesus has come to Pickett's Alley," said Mrs. Henrietta Keel. Mrs. Keel, called "Sister" Keel at the open air Savannah street mission playground where she serves as friend of children and a sort of free-lance missionary, was talking about the new manger scene.

"Prettiest thing within 12 blocks of here," she pronounced. "And the folks down here are as proud as can be."

FULTON BAG BOARDS
The figures in the manger scene were given to the mission by the business women's group of the United Church Women of Atlanta. The neighboring Fulton Bag & Cotton Mill gave rough pine boards to construct a crèche and Sister Keel and the children did the rest.

"Used to be we had a reputation for crime and such," Sister Keel said. "Used to be considered a kind of breeding ground for juvenile delinquency. It's not anymore. We've got good children."

THICK WITH FOLKS
"And you should see the place when the lights go on around the Baby Jesus at night. The fence is thick with folks coming to look and the children . . . scampering up the fence and swinging like possums."

Danny Cothran, a two-headed 5-year-old with a front tooth missing, descended a sliding board head first and shyly approached the manger.

"At baby," he announced gravely, "lives here now."

2 B47s Ram, B29 and F86 Run Together

Two separate collisions involving four Air Force planes killed 14 airmen in Florida Monday.

Two B47 stratojet bombers capable of carrying atom bombs collided late Monday afternoon over the outskirts of Tampa and eight lost their lives.

A Georgia major, who commanded one of the B47s, was among those killed.

SECOND AT NIGHT

At Port St. Joe a B29 bomber and an F86 jet fighter collided Monday night.

A spokesman at Tyndall Air Force base here said the propeller-driven B29 and the F86 all-weather jet interceptor collided about 14 miles east of the base in the vicinity of Mexico Beach.

He said there were no survivors of the second crash.

BASED AT TYNDALL

"We assume that it was an air-to-air collision between the B29 and an F86 which also is unaccounted for," the spokesman said.

Both planes were based at Tyndall and were engaged on a routine training mission. A B29 normally carries a crew of five for such missions and the jet fighter one.

Three bodies were found and search was continuing in wreckage scattered along the Gulf Beach Highway. Other wreckage was believed to have fallen inland.

RAMMED BIG SHIP
Deputy Sheriff J. T. Hersey said that according to reports the fighter rammed the larger plane.

The two air collisions occurred about 20 miles apart.

The strategists met with terrific force over the southeast city limits of Tampa, causing an explosion that terrified residents for miles.

Witnesses said one plane seemed to fly to pieces in the air and the other broke into a thousand bits when it plunged into the ground. Burning wreckage scattered over a wide area.

One of the B47s was from Macomb.

Arab Rioters Force Curfew In Bethlehem

Compiled From Wire Reports

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector, Dec. 19 — Jordanian authorities put Bethlehem under curfew today as Arab rioters stormed the Turkish consulate in the Jordan-administered part of Jerusalem.

Four Arabs were reported killed and 27 injured in a clash between the crowd of 200 to 300 demonstrators and Arab Legionnaires. The rioters were protesting reports that Jordan may join the Western-sponsored Baghdad alliance. Turkey is a founder of the pact.

The pro-Western premier of Jordan decided to resign tonight as a result of the rioting.

Jordan Radio interrupted a broadcast to announce that Premier Hajia El Majali, in office only one week, asked King Hussein to dissolve Parliament. Hussein agreed. The Premier proposed that a caretaker government be established to hold new elections.

The collapse of the Majali government occurred during the height of anti-Western rioting in protest against his plan to link Jordan to the Baghdad Pact.

The angered Arabs tore the Turkish flag from the consulate building and wounded Turkish Consul General Hakkı Kentli, who later

Moscow Repudiates Old View on War

Acknowledges All Humanity Would Share in Disaster

By WELLES HANGEN

The New York Times News Service

MOSCOW, Dec. 19.—The Soviet leaders have explicitly recognized that last summer's Geneva conference of the Big Four heads of government ushered in an era of atomic stalemate in which war among the great powers is excluded.

At the same time Moscow has formally acknowledged that a new war would bring disaster to all humanity and not merely its capitalist members.

The official Soviet line has thus almost returned to the discredited stand taken by former Premier Georgi M. Malenkov in March, 1954, when he said an atomic conflict would cause the "destruction of world civilization."

REVEALED IN INDIA

A new definition of the Soviet position on war and its consequences was given in a joint communique issued last Tuesday by Premier Bulganin, Communist party leader Nikita S. Khrushchev, and India's Prime Minister Nehru at the end of the visit by the Soviet leaders to India.

Veteran Western diplomats here intrigued by seven different references in the communique to the inadmissibility of nuclear war.

Most significant in their view was the communique's contention that the Geneva conference produced a recognition by the great powers "of the futility of war, which, owing to the development of nuclear and thermonuclear weapons, could only bring disaster to mankind."

Such an explicit acknowledgment of an atomic stalemate and the need to renounce war as an instrument of national policy has often been made by President Eisenhower, Prime Minister Eden and other Western leaders. However, observers here believe the New Delhi communique marks the first time the top Soviet rulers have formally avowed the reasons that prompted them to go to Geneva in July.

DOMINATED THINKING

Controversy over these issues has arisen repeatedly in the Soviet Union since World War II. In 1946 Stalin belittled the atomic bomb as a means of "frightening the weak-nerved" and asserted it would not determine the outcome of a new struggle.

This view dominated official Soviet thinking until Malenkov's controversial statement in 1954 on the "destruction of world civilization." The former premier seemingly recanted this view in the following month when he said atomic war would "inevitably result in the disintegration of the capitalist social structure," implying the Communist system would survive.

This doctrine was re-emphasized by Vyacheslav M. Molotov in a speech following Malenkov's resignation last Feb. 8. The foreign minister asserted: "It is not 'world civilization' that will perish, however much it may suffer from new aggression, but the decaying social system of which bloodthirsty imperialism is the core."

The joint statement signed in New Delhi last Tuesday shows the Soviet leaders are no longer so sanguine about the effects of a new war on their own system.

"In order to establish world peace and to eliminate conditions leading to the inconceivable disaster of another world war," it declared, "there is no other course open than that of disarmament." Later the communique spoke of the "ever-increasing destructive potential" of the new weapons and the "urgency" for disarmament.

Bulganin, Khrushchev Score Gains in Asia But Promises May Haunt Them at Payoff

By SEYMOUR TOPPING

LONDON, Dec. 19 (AP)—Premier Nikolai Bulganin and Communist party leader Nikita Khrushchev, the Kremlin's merchants of good will, made big propaganda gains on their Asian tour but the promises they made may haunt them at the payoff.

That was the way British and American diplomatic experts were sizing up the balance sheet of the Russians' history-making trip tonight.

In their high-pressure swing through India, Burma and Afghanistan, the two Soviet leaders appealed to millions of Asians with barbs at Western "colonialism," promises to take Burma's surplus rice, to support India against Portugal and Pakistan on such issues as Goa and Kashmir and to lend Afghanistan 100 million dollars.

But they appeared to have lost ground in the angry reaction on cold war fronts in Europe and other key areas.

Moreover, they appeared to have failed to sway the premiers of all three of the visited countries from their declared policies of neutrality in the cold war.

Afghanistan's premier, Mahmoud Daud, told a news conference in Kabul today the Soviet loan for agricultural, irrigation and power projects contained no secret political or military agreements and could not change Afghan neutrality.

Contrary to Soviet announcement, he said nothing had been decided about using some of the money to expand Kabul's airport. A joint British-French-German firm has been engaged for some time in surveying the airport, hoping to get a construction contract. If the Soviet announcement was true it meant the firm was being shunted aside.

Regardless of the results of the trip, Moscow dispatches indicated the Russians are going to exploit it to the utmost.

Bulganin and Khrushchev were reported preparing to remain two days at Tashkent, Kazakhstan. The stop will delay their return to Moscow until almost the eve of the opening of a special session of the Supreme Soviet, the rubber stamp Parliament, which has been summoned apparently to hear a stage-managed report of the tour. Maximum dramatic attention to the leaders' Asian tour could play down another government report—the lack of progress at the Geneva foreign ministers' conference.

Already it was evident that the Soviet press would hail the Bulganin-Khrushchev travelogue as a great diplomatic achievement. The Communist party newspaper Pravda said today the "fruitful results of negotiations" in Kabul had opened a "new chapter in equally and mutually advantageous cooperation" between the U.S.S.R. and Afghanistan.

Santa Claus Pagan If Put Above Christ

QUESTION: My husband and I think it is pagan to teach our children that there is a Santa Claus. We are telling them that he is a heathen myth.

—R. C.

ANSWER: A child lives in a dream world. There is a make-believe existence. Every tree is a man, every hedge the wall of a fortress, his shaggy dog is a steed, and the imaginative child becomes a knight in shining armor.

I do not think that all parents who speak of Santa Claus are intentionally, or even unintentionally, doing the child any serious injustice. They are playing a game of "let's pretend" with their children, and when they are old enough they realize that it was a game of "make-believe," and no harm was intended.

However, Santa Claus, in too many instances steals the Christmas spotlight from Jesus. When Santa becomes the main character of this holy day instead of Christ whose birthday we commemorate, then we are making it pagan rather than Christian.

Christmas can be a time of explaining the Christmas story, and a time for the whole family to take spiritual inventory of their lives. It is the tenderest, holiest time of the year, and its spirit should not be ruined by commercialism, or selfishness.

Judge Tags $2 Million For Airport

The City of Atlanta was authorized Monday by a Fulton Superior Court judge to issue $2,000,000 in revenue certificates to improve the Municipal Airport.

Judge George P. Whitman Sr. signed the order for the revenue anticipation certificates which will be paid off by revenue from fees, rentals and other charges for use of the airport facilities.

The certificates will finance an overall $8,000,000 program at the airport, including improvements to runways and aprons, construction of a terminal and building of an access road.

A general city bond election, expected to be called next year, would include $4,000,000 for construction of the terminal. The validation petition, filed in

Atlanta Post Office Sets a Record Handling 3.5 Million Letters in Day

The Atlanta Post Office Monday achieved a new one-day record for cancellations.

Acting Postmaster Burl F. Sanders "conservatively" estimated that some 3,500,000 letters were canceled during the day.

The previous one-day Christmas record came on Monday, Dec. 20, 1954, when 3,347,989 letters were canceled, he said.

In regard to Christmas mail, the official said "a lot of residential areas are getting three or four deliveries a day."

Fulton Superior Court, said the city is pledging all the revenues from the airport—after payment of operations and maintenance expenses—towards retirement of the certificates.

During 1956, however, the amount pledged on the certificates will not include 30 per cent of the revenues which goes to the Atlanta Board of Education. This appropriation has been repealed effective Jan. 1, 1957.

The certificates, bearing from 3.4 to 4 per cent interest per year, are in denominations of $1,000 each and are to be dated as of Jan. 1, 1956. They mature on a schedule through 1986.

Monday was the final date taxpayers in the county and at East Point could pay taxes without penalty.

DeKalb County taxpayers have until Dec. 31 to pay taxes without penalty.

The City of Atlanta, Decatur and College Park have already closed tax books for payments without penalty.

Standish Thompson, chief deputy tax commissioner for Fulton, said taxpayers who had not yet paid up could still save themselves some money by making payments before bills are turned over to the back tax office for collections.

Littlest Rebel

The freckle-faced, snaggle-toothed tyke (going on six) was taking in all the shimmering Christmas sights on our Street Floor. He gave thoughtful attention to the myriad Santas-to-the-South in their rakish Confederate caps, then said to his Mama: Well! Even if the damyan-kees did lick us, our side got Santa Claus!

P.S.—Spoken like a true Rebel, son.

P.P.S.—His mama was so amused she forgot to scold him for using a cuss word.

Passage from India

In case the aeronautics wizards have noted any extra commotion in the airwaves between New Delhi, India, and Atlanta, Georgia, they can blame us. Davison's has kept the air-freight convoys beating their wings since before Thanksgiving, rushing in shipment after shipment of precious, handmade-in-India evening bags. How come? Because you (you lovely people) have been sweeping them off our counters with the speed of light. We've just unpacked our fourth and last before-Yuletide shipment. The bags are little gems: black velvet, satin-lined clutches richly hand-embroidered in gold and silver. The incredible low price of 5.99 per bag is like finding an extra gift in your stocking. Haste ye all slow-poke shoppers to Davison's Handbag Department, Street Floor, or flip the dial to WA. 7612.

By my guest!

At this lovely season when the heart overfloweth, it's not unusual for our mail order girl to find tokens of good will tucked into letters along with shopping orders. Sometimes it's a slightly travel-tired camellia which the letter states is "the very first from my bush." Sometimes it's a sprig of holly or a four-leaf clover. Once even, it was a handful of golden sand from the shore at Daytona. And last Friday, she opened a letter bearing the postmark of a small South Georgia town and out bounced a shiny new dime. Wondering a little, she read: "I know how busy you are and hate to bother you with my shopping chores. I once worked in a big store at Christmas, so I know what it's like from your side of the counter. Gracious! I still remember my aching feet!" The letter concluded: "Right now I'm going to have a nice hot cup of coffee and hope you'll have one too; please use the enclosed dime, and be my guest."

Now you know why we love, love Christmas—aching feet and all.

Full Probe Needed Of Vinson Charges

Georgia's Rep. Carl Vinson has made some serious charges against the U.S. Department of Defense—charges that should be pursued to their logical conclusion.

The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee declared Sunday after a study by a subcommittee staff, that the department has abandoned to a "shocking" degree the free enterprise system of open competitive bidding in spending its billions.

The staff study disclosed that during 30 months of procurement operations in which more than $36,000,000,000 was spent, a total of $34,000,000,000 or 94.19 per cent was obligated through negotiated contracts. Only 5.81 per cent was obligated through competitive bidding.

This, Rep. Vinson declared, was not the intent of Congress in writing the law covering procurement in 1947. It certainly has never been the intent of the American people.

Rep. Vinson said he felt that under competitive bidding the government could have saved at least 10 per cent on this $36,000,000,000 worth of purchases. Ten per cent of that amount is more than $3,600,000,000.

Under the negotiated contract method, the department has been giving its business to whomever it wishes.

Coincidentally with Rep. Vinson's accusations comes another from that courageous and outspoken senator from Oregon, Wayne Morse. In a television program Sunday, Sen. Morse charged the Eisenhower administration with "political immorality" on such a scale as to make the Harding administration seem honest.

Charging violations of the conflict of interest statutes, Sen. Morse named names—including that of Secretary of Defense Wilson.

Rep. Vinson's charges deserve a thorough and complete airing by Congress. Certainly at a time when budget balancing and tax cuts seem to be most important considerations, such examples as have been cited of extravagance and political favoritism deserve thorough investigation.

Mink coats and deep freezes were small potatoes compared to the sums of money members of the present administration seem to be throwing around. Congress can do nothing less than try to get at the truth of it.

City Water Is Closer To Sections of Fulton

It looks like city water is on the way to some of Fulton County's arid areas. The county commission has approved a contract whereby the City of Atlanta will extend its mains both north and south. Under the contract, which now must be approved by the county, the county will dig and fill the ditches while the city will lay the lines at county expense.

It is expected that priority will be given to mains along Roswell road from Sandy Springs north to Pitt road, and along Welcome All road from the city limits to the Roosevelt highway.

Each of these sections already is well populated, but will bloom like the proverbial rose once it is supplied with a constant source of water. Slowness in getting city water into unincorporated areas of Fulton has lost a lot of residents for the county and kept land values and the tax digest down.

With the cooperation of the city administration, however, it appears that those shortsighted days are over. Unincorporated sections of Fulton, once they have been well watered, will build up as rapidly as the suburban areas of Cobb and DeKalb.

Bulganin, Krushchev Leave Asia in Triumph

The month-long tour of Premier Bulganin of the Soviet Union and Communist Party Boss Krushchev has ended in triumph. They left Afghanistan Monday with the cheers of millions of Asians ringing in their ears, leaving promises of $100,000,000 in aid to that country alone.

There's no hiding the fact that the Soviet leaders' promises of aid and peace received a hearty reception in that section of Asia in which the cold war finally will be won or lost. Their tour was a smashing propaganda success.

As the authoritative and sober London publication, The Economist, puts it: "They may not have achieved all they hoped for but they have set Asia by the ears. . . . But whatever the extent of their success in putting across their propaganda, one thing is clear: The West ought not to be thrown into either rage or panic. 'Nothing, indeed, would suit the Communist better than a noisy dispute between Westerners, with one faction saying 'We must hasten to buy Asia's friendship' . . . when it would be clear to every Asian that these offers spring from fear . . . while the other complains 'Why waste more money on these ungrateful people who have pocketed our earlier gifts and then spat in our eye?'"

The great danger seems to be that the Communists are setting the stage for further aggressions in Asia by "neutralizing" the key countries of Burma, India, Afghanistan and others. Expansionist moves in Korea, Indochina and about Formosa will have less Asiatic resistance as a result of this tour. These may be expected in the next year.

Army Promises Comfort For Troops in Korea

It's cold enough here in Georgia to make us shiver sympathetically with the United States soldiers shivering in fact in tents in Korea.

Army Secretary Brucker, on a recent visit to the clammey peninsula, found troops stationed in the armistice zone almost as uncomfortable as were War Between the States prisoners at Andersonville. Money has been available for semipermanent and more comfortable quarters, but somewhere along the line somebody didn't get the word with the result that the morale of our soldiers is as low as the Korean temperature.

Secretary Brucker said he was going to do something about it, a statement that was echoed by visiting congressmen who have been over there inspecting our bases.

Tents are luxurious during shooting wars, when outdoor living is the rule rather than the exception. But tent living is inexcusable in winter in an area such as the Korean armistice zone, particularly when the way is clear, and apparently was cleared long ago to furnish adequate quarters. Korea is no fun in peace or war and the least the Army can do is keep its men warm and dry.

Carolina Is Still Ahead In Peach Production

Georgians may as well face it. We can no longer lay legitimate claim to being THE peach state. In fact, the state has been falling back in peach production for 34 years.

Today South Carolina is the undisputed leader in peach production. The value of its peach harvest increased from $837,930 to $4,317,439 in 30 years while the value of Georgia's crop decreased from $8,380,279 to $3,817,215 during the same period.

The number of peach trees in Georgia has declined 70 per cent during the period from 1920 to 1950 while comparable figures for South Carolina show number of trees up by 183 per cent. Quantity harvested has decreased in Georgia by 43 per cent while South Carolina's harvest is up 732 per cent.

The purpose of this discourse is not to start any arguments about native pride and that sort of thing. The figures actually are from the Commerce Department's agricultural census. South Carolina, for some reason, has passed Georgia in peach production, although neither state—thanks to last spring's flash freeze—will take any prizes in 1955.

Here Is a Hunter Who Doesn't Ask Any Odds

Deer hunting is one of the finer sports, requiring true patience and real marksmanship.

Connoisseurs among the deer slayers have refined it past the rifle stage, giving the breaks to the deer, as real sportsmen should. Some hunt deer with pistols, while others make it even more difficult and use bows and arrows.

The ultimate in deer hunting, with bare hands, has been reported by the Brunswick News. Homer Aultman, a garage operator of that city, was out in the county in the line of business. He flushed a deer along the roadside.

"He landed in a ditch and kind of was thrown off balance," the hunter reported to the News. "I got my right hand on his left antler and held on. He pulled me back and forth across the road several times."

"Then I got astraddle of him and Mack (a friend) came up: We wrapped vines around his legs."

"A blow on the head finished the deer, and now the eight-point antlers of a buck decorate Mr. Aultman's garage."

Here's to Georgia's most sporting deer hunter. He wrestled his quarry to the ground and tied him with vines before administering the coup de grace. Mr. Aultman's feat brings the whole history of deer hunting full cycle, back to the days before there were bows and arrows even.

Capital Punishment Is Urged as Best Way To Discourage Nation's Peddlers of Narcotics

Atlanta—I wish every citizen of the U.S.A. and Mexico could have heard the radio broadcast of Sen. Daniel's dope peddling hearings in San Antonio, Tex. Dope peddlers have no respect for age, sex or station in life. They will sell to anyone who has the money, or who will beg, borrow or steal to get it.

So why not make the penalty for dope peddling capital punishment? I would rather be murdered than to have a dope peddler make a friend of me. So why not make the punishment for a peddler death? He creates a living death for the addict and the family of the addict. It is a living hell on this earth.

Can't you help wake up America to this horrible crime and get Congress to make the crime punishable by death?

Ring the Changes On the Name of Mary

Americus—Anent Leo Aikman's column on naming youngsters, don't name your girl child "Mary." Mary is an excellent name and revered among the nations of the earth. However, the girl who starts life as "Mary," probably becomes "Mayme" when she enters school, only to swap this for "Mamie" at Junior High and "Mae" in college ranks. Usually as a member of the married set after about a year she answers to the appellation "Ma" and that settles the changing for all time until she becomes "Gramma." ANNE ONYMOUS.

Ford Foundation Out-Santas Santa

St. Louis, Mo.—The Ford Foundation's granting of a half-billion dollars to schools and hospitals may cause that foundation to become as popular as a short named automobile.

It was a wonderful Christmas-time gesture and it was enough to make any budget committee believe in Santa Claus again.

It's good to know that such a big organization as the Ford Foundation exists and is endeavoring to promote good in our land.

The Ford Foundation has set a pretty fast pace in giving for old Santa, however, with Santa's long experience he may top the foundation's generosity.

Pardon and Parole Board Does Good Job

Atlanta—I know your paper likes to criticize everything. But it is nice to see you write something occasionally praising the Pardon and Parole Board.

It is one division of our government that seems above reproach. This is particularly true because I remember when "pardon racket" was one word like "dumyanket."

I like the board's pardoning of the Army warrant officer for an old offense which he certainly lived down in devoted service to his country in peacetime and through two wars. This pardon cleared his record and let him continue his career with no worry about the past.

Merry Christmas to this board which does a good and conscientious job.

Issues Are Few, Aspirants Many

THOMASVILLE—To start with, it looked as if no one wanted to hold city office in Thomasville.

The five members of the city commission said they did not care to offer for reelection. Suddenly, there was an avalanche of candidates, including three of the five incumbents. Evidently, the trio had reserved the politician's right to change his mind, before or after election. One of the three qualified 20 minutes before the deadline. As a result of the spurt of civic interest, when Thomasvillians go to the polls to-day, they will choose 5 commissioners from a field of 19 and 4 school board members from a list of 7.

The League of Women Voters staged a political rally here the other night. The goal was to find where the candidates stood. The forum, so I hear, assembled almost as many candidates as voters.

And when it was over, where the aspirants to office stood remained obscure even to themselves.

In the two minutes each allotted them, they promised "to give the public what it wants." Generally speaking, that is safe ground. Which suggests the definition of the politician as he who takes one step forward, two steps sideways, one step backwards and then hesitates.

Everyone at the rally had a good time, my informants told me. Fred Scott Jr., who wants to be a city commissioner, told the rally audience he was against sin and illustrated with the story of the preacher who informed his congregation there are 438 types of sin. Whereupon one of the members rose and suggested, "Parson, would you mind naming all 438 kinds? There might be some we've been overlooking."

That was it—the candidates were for love and goodwill, for tax equalization and home rule, for "what is best" in regard to school consolidation. They oppose sin.

Thomasville voters today have a wide choice of personnel, if not of issues, which is more than you can say in many city elections. It's encouraging to see the number of good men here who are willing to serve in public office.

SMALL TALK: Lang, preschool age son of the Langdon Flowers of Thomasville, had bucked on going to Sunday school. His parents applied moral persuasion. Finally, the young man made a concession: "All right, I'll go," he said. "But I won't pay the teacher."

Responsible Speech Rewards the User

Some days ago I was sitting in a restaurant booth. Although no one shared the booth with me, I didn't feel that I was alone. In the next booth were three young women who busied themselves in a conversation which covered innumerable topics and personalities. After a few minutes I thought I knew each of them, for as they talked they unconsciously revealed their hopes, fears, doubts and faiths.

I don't recall the subjects of their conversation, but I do remember that their talking was the liveliest I'd heard in a long time. I judged from the free and natural quality of the conversation that the three women were long-time friends, yet their words came so quickly that I wondered if they thought they would never again see each other.

While visiting a friend recently, I had an unusual experience. During our conversation, our words were recorded. The friend's son had buried a microphone nearby and we didn't realize what had been done until we were told that we were to be subjected to a playback.

These incidents remind me of a fact that we are likely to overlook. It is that the gift of voice puts a man under the important obligation to speak well. It is just as essential that we use our tongues well as that we employ well our hands and feet.

As much trouble came into this world through the misuse of the voice as through anything else. Our words can console, bless, condemn and discourage. They can cheer and encourage, or they can depress and hinder.

St. Paul wrote, "There are many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them is without significance" (1 Corinthians 14:10). How true that is, for our words determine in one way or another the character and quality of the lives of many persons. Therefore, we ought to remember the prayer of old: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer." (Psalm 19:14).

Several days ago there was a news story on the radio about an English lord who for the first time in 30 years spoke up in Parliament. It was interesting to me that when he finally did speak, he talked only about some law on the control of rabbits. Then a few days later there came another story from England and this one concerned a man who had set some new record for constant talking. He had talked continuously for more than 130 hours. Neither man, I think, was using well his gift of speech, for the ability to speak is a priceless, God-given capacity and ought to be used wisely.

British Labor Gets Vigorous New Chief

WASHINGTON—The election of Hugh Gaitskell as leader of the British Labor Party, succeeding Clement Attlee, is an event of interest and importance to Americans. It means that the Labor Party will have as its spokesman in the House of Commons, automatically in line to become a future British prime minister, an economic moderate, a solid political ally of the United States and a statesman who has always been alert to what the Soviet Communists are really up to.

Mr. Gaitskell's election is important both for what it accomplishes and for what it averts.

His election strengthens the bipartisan base of British foreign policy. He is an active advocate of a strong free-world alliance and his influence will be on the side of encouraging and supporting the Eden government to that end.

This is not a departure from the pattern of Mr. Attlee's own leadership. But Mr. Gaitskell comes to his post in a stronger position. His elevation means a simultaneous downgrading of capacity of Aneurin Bevan to make trouble between Great Britain and the United States.

The British Labor Party did not merely elect Mr. Gaitskell as leader. It deliberately rejected Mr. Bevan. This was his critical bid to win control of the Labor Party and carry it down the road of massive government ownership of industry, neutralism and anti-Americanism. Mr. Bevan was hand-somely and consciously put aside.

Mr. Gaitskell received 157 of 257 votes cast in a three-way race. Mr. Bevan, 70, and Labor's present deputy leader, Herbert Morrison, 40, Mr. Gaitskell's clear majority is rendered more meaningful by the fact that Mr. Morrison's supporters would be pro-Gaitskell, certainly not pro-Bevan.

Mr. Bevan's decisive defeat gives Mr. Gaitskell's leadership an authority which in the last few years had gradually slipped from Mr. Attlee's hands.

Adlai Is Still Ahead Of Democratic Pack

WASHINGTON—We now have a two-horse race for the Democratic presidential nomination. But Adlai Stevenson is much further out in front of Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, the second entrant, than the elapsed time between their respective starts, which is about five weeks.

For many favorable things happened for Adlai Stevenson long before his formal announcement on Nov. 15, and lots have happened since, notably commitments from key party leaders in all parts of the country.

To make the Democratic situation still more lively, we had another addition to the collection of dark horses just before Sen. Kefauver tossed his hat into the ring. Five-time Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio, a conservative who gets along with Republicans, proclaimed himself a "favorite son" candidate from Ohio. He thus joined a field of dark horses in which only two now are making noises. But those two—Govs. Averell Harriman of New York and Mennen Williams of Michigan—are making plenty.

We can disregard all those for the time being. In fact, we probably can disregard them entirely so far as first place on the ticket is concerned, except for one eventuality. That is if Sen. Kefauver should upset Stevenson in key primaries next spring.

In such a case a sort of draw might be produced between these two out of which someone now in the dark-horse category, rather than Sen. Kefauver, might benefit. That would be because the discrediting of Adlai Stevenson, or a stalemate between him and the

Called Swine, 2 GIs Say; Freed in Attack on Comic

BERLIN, Dec. 19 (UP)—An Army court-martial acquitted two soldiers today of a Communist charge that they attacked a notoriously anti-American cabaret comedian in Red-ruled East Berlin.

The court accepted the testimony of the soldiers, backed up by a German woman eyewitness, that the comedian was the aggressor and got what he asked for.

It developed that the comedian called one of the GIs "an American swine" and "an American pig." He showed toward one of the soldiers as if to follow up his epithets. One of the soldiers knocked him down with a blow to the eye.

Privates Willie J. Holden, 19, of Poplarville, Miss., and Richard L. Calbert, 22, of Kansas City, Mo., were charged before the court with "being disorderly in a public place."

They were arrested by East Berlin Communist police Dec. 7 outside a barroom after a scuffle with Werner Lierck, star of a cabaret long known for its violently anti-American shows.

The Communists charged that the GIs brutally beat Lierck into unconsciousness after he rebuked them for making anti-Communist remarks.

The Reds made a sensation of the incident. They published pictures showing Lierck in bed attended by a nurse. East Berlin newspapers said he would need several weeks of bed rest and a long leave. They demanded that the soldiers be tried by a Red court.

The Russians, however, turned over the soldiers to American authorities four days later.

Hildegard Eggers, 34, who since has fled to West Berlin, supported the soldiers' story.

"Lierck called me an American swine and American pig in English, and when he pushed Calbert and moved toward me so as to hit me I thought I better hit him first," Holden said.

Dancer Shirley Crawford

Exotic Dance Sheds Anger Of Laborite

LONDON, Dec. 19 (UP)—Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden was faced today with four pictures of a nearly nude belly dancer and a demand to investigate why she was allowed to perform in a government building.

Laborite member of Parliament Arthur Lewis personally took the photos to Eden's office at 10 Downing Street and handed them in with a letter demanding an investigation because "no one knows where this sort of thing could lead to." Eden's secretary accepted the bundle.

The dancer, Shirley Crawford, a voluptuous blonde of 20, literally snuffed at the uproar. At home in bed with a cold, Shirley said there was "nothing rude" about her dance, although she said it was "shocking."

Wearing a coat of silver paint, she performed at a postal workers' stag party in a Treasury office down the street from Eden's residence.

Shirley, who measures 37-24-35 and stands 5 feet 3 inches, said she considered wearing clothing under the paint but decided not to. "I decided it spoilt the effect," she said, "so I just wore my paint."

First reports had it that Shirley sported a feather or a fig leaf in addition to the paint. Lewis said an investigation indicated she wore nothing but the paint.

Lewis said he is "not opposed to chappies having a bit of fun, but under different circumstances. This makes it sound like the government approved belly dancing."

Delivery of All Yule Mail Vowed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (UP)—Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield said today post offices across the country intend to see to it that no mail remains undelivered in post offices on Christmas Day.

He made the pledge in asking local chambers of commerce to check up on mail deliveries in their cities again this year.

U.N. Assembly To End Today on Vote Granting Yugoslavia a Seat on Council

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Dec. 19.—The General Assembly is now scheduled to end its 1955 session tomorrow morning after electing Yugoslavia to the Security Council to replace Turkey.

Under a deal worked out by Jose Maza, president of the Assembly, Yugoslavia will resign after serving one year and the assembly will elect the Philippines for the remainder of the two-year term.

Although many delegates protested when the deal was announced Friday Night, it was accepted today at meetings of delegates from the British Commonwealth and Western European countries. The Soviet Bloc, now increased to nine, also accepted it, and Yugoslavia thus appeared to be certain of getting the required two-thirds majority.

The Latin American delegates, almost all of whom had supported the Philippines for 34 straight ballots, also met today to discuss the deal but took no action.

They will meet again tomorrow morning, before the assembly convenes, to decide their position. Before the deal on new members last week the 20 Latin American delegates accounted for one-third of the assembly membership, and no country could be elected to the Security Council without their approval. Now that the membership has increased to 76, however, they have lost some of their former influence.

On the 35th ballot, taken after the deal was announced, there was still no two-thirds, and in fact many delegates abstained to show their disapproval.

However, it was found over the weekend that it was impossible to get agreement on possible compromise candidates. Italy, Sweden and Greece were all considered.

The United States, which has backed the Philippines, and Britain, which supported Yugoslavia, joined their efforts over the weekend to obtain acceptance of the deal. The deadlock, the longest in the history of the United Nations, resulted from the fact that both Eastern Europe and the Soviet bloc supported Yugoslavia, while most of the Asian countries,

Under President Roosevelt he was coordinator of inter-American affairs and assistant secretary of state for Latin America.

Recently Rockefeller has been a leader within the government of the group which fought a losing fight for a bolder and somewhat bigger program of economic aid to underdeveloped countries.

Latest reports are that the economic aid total to be asked of Congress, about $1,900,000,000, will be a little larger than the $1,600,000,000 approved for this year.

The Rockefeller group did, however, win some changes in the program to make it more flexible and adaptable to individual situations in underdeveloped countries. Quite apart from the economic aid figure, the administration reportedly has decided to ask a doubling in military aid appropriations.

There was no hint that the Rockefeller resignation was over the foreign aid issue, though he was known to feel strongly on the point.

The President today had a visit at his farm, described as "mostly social," from Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. He also spoke by telephone with Secretary of State Dulles, who reported on the recent North Atlantic Treaty Organization meetings in Paris.

WAITING FOR SANTA—SAN RAFAEL, Calif., Dec. 19—This little dog, perched atop Christmas decorations, is waiting to be claimed at the Marin County Humane Society pound. "Blackie" is hoping for a little boy or girl for Christmas.

escaped into the Israeli sector of Jerusalem.

Fears that the disturbances might spread led to setting up the curfew in Bethlehem, the scene of Christ's birth six miles to the south. The 4 p.m. to 6 a.m. ban on street traffic in the village came as Christmas week observances opened there.

The ban was announced by Radio Ramallah, which is controlled by the Jordan government. The broadcast did not mention the Jerusalem riots, but it said the curfew had been decreed by Hassan el Kassem, governor of Jerusalem and the holy places.

U. N. personnel and diplomats who were in the Jordan sector of Jerusalem during the day said the demonstrators charged the consulate in two waves. These witnesses

Martin told the general that Hendricks has "a heart as big as a watermelon."

The sergeant, who has been in military service 15 years and was imprisoned by the Japanese for three years after his capture on Bataan, wrote to Jeanette for a year before he met her. He was stationed in Alaska in 1953 and saw Jeanette's picture in a national magazine.

"I knew then that some day, somehow, I was going to marry her," he said.

Jeanette has undergone five operations to straighten her twisted legs. She still faces surgery on her left eye (her right eye is sightless). But she thinks she is "a very lucky girl."

Airman Hendricks and Miss Hulsey plan to be married at the Cathedral of St. Philip Friday, Jan. 13. The bride will be in a wheelchair, but she will wear a traditional wedding gown. There will be a wedding reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Martin.

CHRISTMAS STORY: Dreadful Thought for Araminta scornfully. "Mother's smart to skip Ted. Another preacher, like Grandpa. Another mission, probably like this one. I wouldn't let my mother waste herself on such a marriage."

"So I hear," Slick sniffed. "Well, you know everything, Miss Fixit. Tell your mother not to hurt — and your Grandpa, too. He's somewhere now all cut up because Charlie Puckett tried to kill himself last night."

Araminta was shocked into silence.

She stood on the stairs looking at Slick, open-mouthed. To throw away the gift of life . . . that was a sin. Charlie Puckett wouldn't dare. Why Grandpa wouldn't have it!

She started to speak but Slick had yawned again and gone on. She went down the stairs, slowly, troubled.

Grandpa was not in his office and Mother was not at her desk outside his door. Araminta looked in forlornly and wandered on back to the dining room. The breakfast dishes had been cleared away but some of The Folks continued to sit — complaining about the weak coffee, Araminta supposed. She got a bowl of cereal and a glass of milk and returned to the table, feeling shy about sitting with them after her outburst of the night before.

But they paid her scant attention. They were so busy talking.

"And Mrs. Dumas was so upset she went into the pantry and ate every last one of them fruitcakes the Reverent was saving for Christmas." Mr. Hunt was finishing an account. "So this morning they had to take her to the Grady — she's that sick."

Miss Starry-Sky Higgins, still in her beaded violet crepe, was listening attentively and Araminta expected her to say something grand about the greedy ways of common people.

Instead she looked like she was going to cry.

"I tell you trouble's among us," she said softly. "That poor boy."

All the time his heart hungering and not knowing it. And now Mrs. Dumas, poor soul. People ought to help one another, Mr. Hunt. Mr. McIntosh and that dear, sad girl can't do everything for all of us. Come with me to the chapel and let's talk to the others."

Miss Starry-Sky in her ridiculous hand-me-down finery led the way and Mr. Hunt, walking with difficulty with his one crutch, stumped along behind her.

Araminta watched them. What did they think they could do? There was so plainly nothing anyone could do. Christmas in a mission was bound to be perfectly dreadful. Everybody's troubles came home to roost. She didn't know what Charlie Puckett's heart was "hungering" for. She didn't know why anybody should feel sorry for Mrs. Dumas for being a pig. And if her mother was a "dear, sad girl" it was no wonder—no money to spend, no home of her own, no nice presents.

A feeling of sadness and self-pity gathered in her throat and Araminta found she couldn't swallow any more cereal. What about me? Christmas should have been her time—and here she was, having no fun at all. The family didn't exchange many presents and with all this trouble infecting The Folks . . . if she had had some money she'd have some fun.

The solution to her problems came to Araminta so suddenly she put her spoon down with a bang that caused her milk glass to jump on the scrubbed table top.

The honor box. Grandpa kept a few dollars in an old tin box on the office desk for anyone who needed it. The idea was to take what you needed and pay it back when you could.

Well, she needed the money. She needed some fun. What was to prevent her taking the money and going downtown?

Araminta didn't once think about paying the money back.

Vanderbilt Crushes Bulldog Five, 85-61

Commodores' Thym Gets 25

Special to The Constitution
NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 19—Vanderbilt lived up to its reputation as a national cage power here tonight, downing Georgia's fighting but outmanned Bulldogs, 85-61.

For the first half, Red Lawson's young Georgia club turned in a supreme effort of the not-too-old season and trailed the nation's fifth-ranked, team, 45-37.

But in the second half it was all Vanderbilt. The Commodores turned on the steam to smother any upset plans the Bulldogs might have been brewing.

In the first half, Georgia was paced by unheralded Don Hartsfield, a sophomore from Atlanta, and center Bill Ensley of Chatsworth. Ensley was high point man for the Bulldogs with 15 points for the night's work, while Hartsfield and Morris Dinwiddie were next with 10 apiece.

Bobby T hym, forward, got 25 points to lead the powerful Vanderbilt attack. He rang up 13 points the first half and 12 the second. His running mate, Jo Gibbs, had 20 points. Babe Taylor was next for the home club with 15. Al Rochelle, Vanderbilt's high scorer, was held to four points. Both teams substituted freely. It was the fifth straight victory for the Commodores, who are ranked fifth nationally by one wire service.

Hartsfield, Ensley Star

Massachusetts defeated Boston College, 91-73, and St. Anselm's downed Colby, 63-52, in the other games of the Boston Garden tripleheader.

OSU Edges Tulane

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 19 (AP)—Ohio State, with the famed jump shot of Robin Freeman suddenly worthless, found out it had at least one other star tonight and defeated Tulane 72-66.

Although Freeman, the nation's leading scorer, was top man of the night for the winners with 21 points, the big factor in the Ohio State victory was 6-5 Frank Howard. Howard got 20 rebounds and scored 18 points.

Tulane's Roy Stoll, a six-foot senior, shadowed Freeman all night.

Question No. 8—"What were some of the sport trends of the year?"

It was discovered that all teams winning football games were using the belly series and all pitchers winning baseball games were using the slider, and the boxers' legs go first, that every manager who got a new job promised to have a hustling team, that all alumni really love the coach except when he loses, that the sound of a whistle drives most basketball coaches insane and that it is possible to take a dive in a Calcutta pool.

The Tardy Balloteer

It has developed in social circles over a period of years that to be late is to be fashionable. Each year about this time I'm so fashionable it hurts.

I'm late with my Christmas shopping. I'm late with my All-America selections. I'm late for parties. I'm late for speeches. The only thing I'm not late for is my vitamins. I hold a fantastic record for being prompt at the table.

Monday afternoon I discovered I was late for something else. Not my dental appointment. I didn't show up at all. I came up with a dandy excuse. I told my dentist I had to vote. He said he thought it was funny that I was the only guy in the state who was voting this year. I said I supposed he would, but it was just a part of my grind. He didn't think that was very funny, and it wasn't.

I really was supposed to vote. The Associated Press was pressing for the selections in its annual poll for the year's superlatives. Only trouble was, when I sat down to mark my ballot I found I was three hours late. The polls had closed at noon. Or else the AP shut me out on purpose. I've had as much trouble getting counted on their chart as a Democrat in Vermont.

But I shall forge ahead and cast my ballot as if the AP were listening. oblivious to the passing of the deadline. Maybe the United Press can use it.

Question No. 1—"Who was the outstanding male athlete of the year, pro or amateur, any sport? (Name three.)"

First—J. Bruce Swango, a pitcher who was paid $36,000 not to pitch for the Baltimore Orioles, who had a lot of other guys drawing a lot less but achieving the same result.

Second—Bob Hagge, a three-letterman in golf who completed the Bauer sweep.

Third—Tennessee Ernie, a weight-lifter who was able to support 16 tons.

Question No. 2—"Who was the outstanding female athlete?"

First—Mrs. Dolores Olson, a judo expert who decked her husband in Chicago and modestly gave all the credit to Sugar Ray.

Second—The dame who water-skied from Nassau to Miami on one leg, which shows you how unreasonable a woman can be.

Third—Mrs. Charlie Dessen, who never wrote a letter all year.

—T. Lamar Comes Out of Oblivion

Question No. 3—"What was the outstanding team of the year?"

First—The Blasies and the McIntyres, who took a hold on City Auditorium and never let go.

Second—Adolph Rupp, who qualifies only because he was beside himself after Georgia Tech whipped Kentucky the second time in basketball.

Third—Alabama (football), a dream of consistency: Ten games, ten defeats.

Question No. 4—"What was the comeback of the year?"

First—T. Lamar Caudle, who had faded out with the Democrats, Harriv. mink coats, deep freezes and Washington influence guys.

Second—Mobile baseball fans, who were just before being declared legally dead.

Third—Archie Moore, Rocky Marciano's victim. After taking the beating of his life, Moore said, "He's got a long way to go." And in a split second added: "But he'll make it."

Question No. 5—"What was the sports oddity of the year?"

First, second and third—Marvin Griffin, who wins it hands down, in a breeze, by a landslide, going away. (Check one.)

Question No. 6—"What was the upset of the year?"

First—Ewart Potgeiter, the South African boxing giant, who when he fell (which was frequent) usually brought the ring down with him.

Second—Frank Lane, who went through two baseball conventions without making a deal.

Third—Defeat of Christine Jorgenson in the mixed doubles at Forest Hills.

Question No. 7—"Name the dog of the year."

Bill Beagle of Dartmouth and Ron Beagle of Navy (a tie).

Question No. 8—"What were some of the sport trends of the year?"

It was discovered that all teams winning football games were using the belly series and all pitchers winning baseball games were using the slider, and the boxers' legs go first, that every manager who got a new job promised to have a hustling team, that all alumni really love the coach except when he loses, that the sound of a whistle drives most basketball coaches insane and that it is possible to take a dive in a Calcutta pool.

Rams Lose Their Tank

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19 (AP)—Chances of the Los Angeles Rams for the world's pro championship title were dimmed somewhat with the disclosure today that fullback "Tank" Younger is out of the game with injuries.

He has a hairline fracture of a neck vertebra, Dr. Danny Fortmann, team physician, reported.

"This is not to be confused with a broken neck," Dr. Fortmann explained. "The hairline fracture, extremely hard to find, has started to knit. However, it is not deemed advisable to permit Younger to play next Monday."

Sorely disappointed with the announcement, coach Sid Gillman looked to "Deacon" Dan Towler to step into Younger's brogans against the Browns in Memorial Coliseum here.

In practice today, linebacker Larry Morris did double duty working behind Dan Towler at the fullback job.

Sylvan FB Wins Tolbert Trophy

City Athletic Director Sid Scarborough presented the C. T. Tolbert Memorial Trophy to Frapart, fullback for Coach Jimmy Green's 1955 Region 3-AA South champions. It was the second time the award, given annually to the most valuable player in Atlanta's 13-school metropolitan system, has gone to a Sylvan back. Quarterback Stan Cochran won the trophy in 1952, when Frapart was a freshman.

Student emcee Mike Hein made several kidding presentations on behalf of the varsity players, including a compass he gave Pete (Wrong-Way) Demos, who's still trying to shake off the nickname he picked up with a fumble he chased too far from enemy territory in one game.

Fanny and her master wanted to tell me a tale that they thought might save some dogs' lives, and some hunters, too. It doesn't get cold enough in south Georgia to put the venomous rattler to bed for the winter, so wear protection down there—good, thick socks and boots.

Fanny had a big stained bandage around her neck, and since she is one of my favorite females, I inquired how she got scratched through all that shaggy hair (for she is setter-ish for a drop, and kind of cuddly looking, though she'd hate that word).

Fanny pointed a covey of birds and the Garlington party got their usual share, then went after the singles. They found Fanny transfixed, but looking different, than on usual

Tech Cagers Get Boost With Tillman

This was further emphasized this past weekend when—for the first time in memory of Tech observers—a standout high school football star was signed to a strictly basketball-baseball grant-in-aid.

The precedent-setter is Bobby Tillman, a senior at Isaac Litton High School in Nashville and acclaimed the finest athlete to walk in its halls since George Volkert cast his football lot at Tech.

rate solely on basketball and baseball at Georgia Tech. He was signed this weekend by Whack Myder. Tech basketball coach

Tillman, an All-City baseball player, performed as a pitcher, catcher and shortstop. His mound record was 4-0. He fanned 66 and allowed only 14 hits in 42 innings. A power hitter, Tillman slashed .340 but 20 hits in 49 times at bat for an average of .408. He's playing in his third year, and he's

Callier Calls Shots For Unbeaten Tigers

Snipes Handles Rebound Work

By MORT PERSKY

Ed O'Quinn's Northside basketball team plays its 11th pre-Christmas game with Russell Tuesday night, still trying to get that "little more" experience they act as though they don't need.

It is a pretty good act too, and if Russell succumbs on its visit to the Tiger gym, the defending state

AA champs will be Northside's 11th consecutive victim. Fallen by the wayside already are Chamblee, Milton of Alpharetta, Griffin, Newnan, Avondale, Lanier, Baker, Sylvan, Roosevelt and Sprayberry.

What has Northside got? The answer: scrappiness, Bud Callier, youth, Bud Callier, a little height, Bud Callier, Steve Snipes and Bud Callier.

Callier, a 6'1 senior forward, typically had his best night of the year a week ago against Baker, hardest-dying (67-66) for the Tigers have met all year. And, after he had hit six of six longies in the second half, Baker Coach Bubba Ball was ready to tell the world that Callier is one of Georgia's all-time high school stars. Better even than Baker star Tommy Darrah, said Ball.

Callier makes a habit of living up to that kind of compliment. He can do anything, including jump, set and drive. He thrives on pressure.

Snipes, 6'3 center who is the team's only other senior, out-rebounds Callier and so far has kept up with him in the point department. Making his biggest rebound hauls at the opposition's backboard and following with hooks and jumps at the other side of the court. Snipes has averaged 19 points a game, same as Bud. Steve hit 31 against Griffin.

The underclassmen don't disgrace their higher-scoring mates by a long shot. Sophomore forward Roy Roberts, 6-2, is handy at rebounding and tip-ins. And there are four guards, all youngsters, with a chance at the starting positions: Rick Madison, Max Staples, Mike Thomas and Tiny Williamson, who not long ago was a castoff at another school because of his height.

Suwanee, Tucker Divide Games

TUCKER, Dec. 19—Betty Moore of Suwanee had another night over 30 leading her sextette over Tucker with 38 points, 52-48, while the Tucker men retaliated by whipping Suwanee, 65-61.

The boys' game was tied almost from beginning to end. Donald

Fort Mac to Caguas, Phillips Still Winning

DIAMOND DIARY

By JESSE OUTLAR

Taylor Phillips, who co-starred with Wilmer Mizell at Ft. Mac last summer, is wowing winter league scouts with his nifty hurling for Caguas in the Puerto Rican circuit.

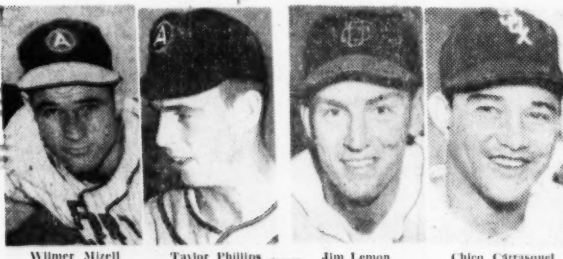

Jesse Outlar

Hyde is still the man Mann wants most. Incidentally, Lemon has batted 16 homers in 41 games in the Pacific Coast League of Mexico, twice as many as his nearest rival.

Milwaukee rumor mill says it and when the Braves pull off the deal for Frank Thomas with Pittsburgh, ex-Cracker Chuck Tanner and Jack Dittmer will be tossed in as part payment. All of which is a bit baffling since Tanner was voted the outstanding Brave rookie last season. . . . Veteran Southern Leaguer Danny Ryan returning to Birmingham as a catcher-coach. . . . Outfielder Jim Frey, obtained by the Cracker recently, injured his foot while playing for Pastora, Venezuela, and has returned to the states for treatment. Joe Schultz, who bossed Nashville last summer, has Pastora winging in front in the Occidental League race. . . . Catcher Steve Korcek, who divided the '55 campaign between Washington and Chattanooga, has entered the Army and is stationed at Ft. Jackson. . . . Tom Casagrande, a $40,000 bonus bust with the Philadelphia Phils, may call it a career and start a new one as an umpire.

When the Chicago White Sox dealt Chico Carrasquel to Cleveland for Larry Doby, a baseball writer quipped, "At last Avila has a shortstop he can talk to, even if neither of them can make a double play." . . . Jack Sanford, who toured the Southern Association for the Philadelphia Phils, was let out the other day. . . . Found a Texan who isn't eager to go back to Texas: Murray Wall, who'd rather pitch for the Cracker than Dallas, the club to which Mann sold him. Wall is connected with a local radio station this winter. . . . Bill George, who put in three seasons at Poncey, says he'll welcome a change of scenery. The veteran lefty, a post office employee here during the off season, will be pitching against his old roommate Joe Piercey in the Texas League. George's new address is Shreveport, and Piercey jumped all the way to Houston when he quit the Cracker in mid-stream. . . . Jim Solt, another former Cracker working here this winter, recently underwent minor surgery. Cracker's Earl Hersch was the Southern Association "iron man" last summer, the only player appearing in all 154 games. . . . In scanning Southern records for '55, you are amazed by the digits opposite Jerry Dahlke's name. The Memphis reliever didn't surrender a homer in 117 innings, finished with a 19-5 record, including 17 relief victories and an ERA of 1.85. . . . Trip of the year: Southern Pres. Charlie Hirth's junket to El Salvador with the Loyola (La.) college team. . . . Mystery of the year: How Little Rock, a perennial flop in the standings and at the box office with a working agreement, expects to function at all without one. Detroit gave the Travs the boot.

Colquitt Courthouse Blast Scene

One dynamite stick planted near Sheriff Eddie Gordon's office shattered windows in the Colquitt County courthouse at Moultrie, while another thrown near where several children were sleeping failed to explode, officers said.

The courthouse blast went off about midnight Saturday and blew out three windows in the sheriff's office and two in the second floor office of the Veterans Service.

It also smashed a holly tree near where the charge was placed between some shrubbery and the courthouse porch.

The unexploded dynamite was thrown about the same time near the tents of the Dixie Exposition Show on the Spence Field Road.

Deputy Sheriff J. H. Powell said the fuse had been pulled and gone out or several children of carnival workers sleeping in the tents might have been killed.

The officers said they are following several leads and have a theory about the dynamiting.

Master Farm Family

Eldred Lee and his family have been chosen Ware County's "Master Farm Family" of 1955 by other farmers in the county.

A recount of votes in the Toombs County races for solicitor of City Court and superintendent of county schools was held before Judge J. L. Renfro of Superior Court, but did not change the results of the first count made after the Dec. 14 primary.

William T. Darby, incumbent solicitor, who asked for the recount and who needed but four more votes to win over William T. Whitley, was found to be 18 votes short of victory in the recount.

Miss Ruth Martin, principal-teacher at Toombs Creek elementary school in Stephens County, was named the first "Teacher of the Year" in the county.

Dogs Quarantined

The Jackson County Board of Health has ordered that all dogs in the Brockton, Attica and Redstone areas be quarantined for a period not to exceed 60 days.

A case of rabies in a fox was recently reported in the county.

Mayor V. S. Bearden of Clayton was defeated in his bid for reelection by L. F. Reeves by a vote of 287 to 70.

Property owners, whose land was obtained by the federal government through condemnation proceedings for the site of the Army's Kings Bay ammunition depot site in Camden County, Monday obtained the testimony of Scott Candler, secretary of the Georgia Department of Commerce, and Robert M. Holder, Atlanta industrial real estate agent, to support their demands for higher payments for their land.

Savannah has been mentioned as a possible site for the headquarters of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, which the company has announced will be from Wilmington, N.C. Meanwhile, the chamber of commerce in Ware County and other groups in Waycross are making an "all-out" effort to have the offices of the railroad located in Waycross.

Oil Test Well Drill Begun By Atlantian

Wiley P. Ballard, Atlanta oil operator, and a group of his associates began drilling operations on a proposed 4,000-foot wildcat test well in northern Clinch County Monday afternoon.

The new well, which is on a 10,000-acre plot of leased property, is only about 30 miles south of the Coffee County well which showed traces of oil in September. No oil in commercial quantities has ever been found in Georgia.

Ballard, who has discovered a number of oil fields in Texas and has drilled wells in both Texas and Oklahoma, said, "We'll drill until we find oil in commercial quantities or hit granite."

"THERE IS OIL." He stated that he thinks granite will be encountered at about 4,500 feet.

Ballard said that commercial amounts of oil have been found in Alabama and Mississippi in formations similar to those in north Clinch County.

"The Coffee County well proved one thing—there is oil in the state," he said. "But finding it in large enough quantities to make it worthwhile is the major problem."

Ballard said it will probably take two or three weeks to complete the well.

TO HELP PINPOINT Garland Peyton, director of the State Department of Mines, Mining and Geology, expressed pleasure that a well is being drilled in north Clinch. "Even if they do not succeed, the drilling itself will help in determining where they should have started," he said.

He pointed out that Georgia has drilled less than 75 wells. Alabama tried some 400 times before hitting pay dirt.

"There is reason to believe there may be a formation in north Clinch County which has trapped oil and prevented it from flowing away. Drillers to the north have encountered fresh water—a bad sign," Peyton said. "But to the south they have found salt water in the sand. This causes us to believe there may be an oil-trapping barrier in the area."

'Meet the Press' Softens for Yule

By RICHARD F. SHEPARD
The New York Times News Service
NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Dean Hunter and Peter C. Tripp have been signed to conduct two musical programs for WMGM.

Hunter will take over It's a Woman's World from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. He comes to his new chores from Philadelphia, where he ran a popular disc-jockey program under the name of Gabe Miller.

Tripp, who had high ratings as a disc jockey in Kansas City, will be the host on Your Hits of the Week from 5 to 8 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays.

The Radio Corporation of America is putting the finishing touches to its first color television mobile unit that will be available to broadcasters for televising local events.

The unique rental service will begin with the one unit serving stations within 150 miles of Philadelphia. The company plans to extend the project to other major TV centers in the future.

The unit will serve stations that have facilities for color transmission. It is equipped with video and audio facilities and two studio cameras for taking "live" shots of events.

The first program using the service will be WCAU-TV, which will broadcast the annual Mums' Parade in Philadelphia on New Year's Day.

Met the Press plans to simmer down in order not to violate the spirit of Christmas. Its guest next Sunday will be Robert Frost, the Pulitzer prize-winning poet. Frost is not likely to be subjected to hot questions on burning and frequently controversial issues.

Meet the Press is broadcast on radio and television on Sundays at 6 p.m. by the National Broadcasting Co.

Radio station WINS also has taken note of Christmas. It announced that it will delete all commercial announcements from 6:35 p.m. Christmas Eve until 6:30 p.m. Christmas Day. The station said it would present 24

Kim Stanley Co-stars in Teen Drama

Special to The Constitution
NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Kim Stanley, noted Broadway and TV actress, will co-star with Louis Jean Heydt in "The Waiting Place" during the Playwrights 56 show at 9:30 p.m. on NBC-TV (WSB-TV) at 9:30 p.m. The compassionate story of a young girl on the threshold of discovery of herself as a woman was written by Tad Mosel.

Miss Stanley will play the role of Abby, a 14-year-old who, in the quiet of a deep ravine, keeps a frequent but lonely rendezvous with a young Gypsy boy of her imagination. There, too, she goes seeking an elusive solace when she feels pained rejection at the hands of her widowed father (Heydt).

Only Evva (Louise Platt), a gentle and lonely woman, understands Abby's yearning and fierce feeling of affection for her father, for she too loves him. And only Abby's grandmother (Dorrit Kellton) can finally make understandable to the young girl the awakening within her and the direction it will take.

Seventy-five television appearances have added to Miss Stanley's stature and reputation as an actress. She achieved stardom on Broadway during 1954 in the leading role of "The Traveling Lady."

For her performance in "Bus Stop" earlier this year she won new acclaim. Miss Stanley received the Drama Critics' Award in 1953 for her acting in William Inge's Pulitzer prize-winning play "Picnic," and also the Donaldson Award.

Arthur Penn will direct "The Waiting Place." Fred Coe is producer of the "Playwrights 56" series.

Ike Won't Fail U.S., Martin Says

Sees Medical Okay on Race

By W. H. LAWRENCE
The New York Times News Service
WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 — The House Republican leader reiterated tonight a forecast that President Eisenhower will seek reelection because "he will not fail his country."

Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, former speaker, said he thought the President's doctors will find him "physically capable of carrying the high important duties of president."

ALL THE FACTS

Martin told questioners on the Mutual Broadcasting System panel show, "Reporters' Round-up," that the President should make known his intentions about 1956 only when he has all the facts, including a definitive report from his heart specialists.

Martin thus declined to join the Republican leader of the Senate, Sen. Knowland of California, who has declared the President should make known by the end of January whether he will seek reelection.

The Martin broadcast coincided with Democratic assertions that many of the divisions and rivalries in the Republican Party are becoming evident again while the President is recuperating from his Sept. 24 heart attack.

IN-FIGHTING

The Democratic Digest asserted in its January issue that there has been a lot of in-fighting among high officials during the period the President has been away from his desk.

"Whatever Mr. Eisenhower decides (on running again), the record shows that the Republican Party never wanted to follow the Eisenhower moderate course, and still doesn't," the Digest said.

"Moreover, the record shows that even Mr. Eisenhower's great magnetism is not strong enough to unite his dissident party, nor potent enough to bring the GOP old guard into the 20th century."

Martin, on the panel show, was asked the direct question as to whether he thought the President would run again.

SERVE WHEN CALLED

"Yes, I do," he replied, "because I think that he is a graduate of West Point and one thing West Point teaches its students is to serve their country when the call is made, and I believe that we are in a tense and serious situation. I think the call will be made and I think Mr. Eisenhower will respond and he will be re-elected."

The GOP House leader was asked if he felt that Mr. Eisenhower was an indispensable man. He replied that "no man is indispensable," but that the President was "an extremely valuable man."

'Pastor Made Advances,' Wife Defends Hubby in Slaying

WEATHERFORD, Tex., Dec. 19 — Murder charges in the slaying of a Baptist minister were being prepared tonight against a man whose wife said the pastor "made advances at me."

Dist. Atty. Roy Grogan said he would file the charges before morning against Walter M. Vaughn of Denver City, Tex., in the slaying Saturday of the Rev. Chester Stevens.

Mrs. Vaughn told The Associated Press from her home in Denver City tonight that Stevens was an "egotistic" who also made advances to several other women members of the church after going to Denver City two years ago. She said she did not tell her husband until after the minister went to Weatherford two months ago.

Grogan continued to decline to discuss the details of the case.

Earlier, Mrs. Vaughn said she felt her husband "was justified" in the shooting.

Vaughn has been held without charge in the Weatherford jail since Stevens, 39, was shot six times in the head and chest with a .22 caliber revolver.

Grogan said earlier there were witnesses to the shooting but he refused to give their names or say what their statements were.

Vaughn was a former member of the Denver City Baptist Church where the Rev. Stevens was pastor before coming to Weatherford as pastor of the Harmony Baptist Church.

The largest man-made lake in the world is Gatun Lake, part of the Panama Canal.

'Youngest' Housekeeper in This Ky. Town At 101 Credits 'Youth' to Mop and Broom FULTON, Ky., Dec. 19 — The "youngest" housekeeper in town celebrated her 101st birthday anniversary today.

Calling for a broom and a mop, Mrs. Ethel Byrd gave her room a vigorous cleaning. Then she sat down to catch her breath.

"Housekeeping can be tiring sometimes but it keeps me young and healthy," she explained. "I like for my room to be neat as a pin. I do most of the work myself but need a little help when changing linens on the bed."

A native of Tennessee, Mrs. Byrd remembers the Civil War well.

"It's all so clear. We were living on a farm out near Nashville, then, and every morning the Yankees would tear through the place, getting food for themselves and corn for their horses."

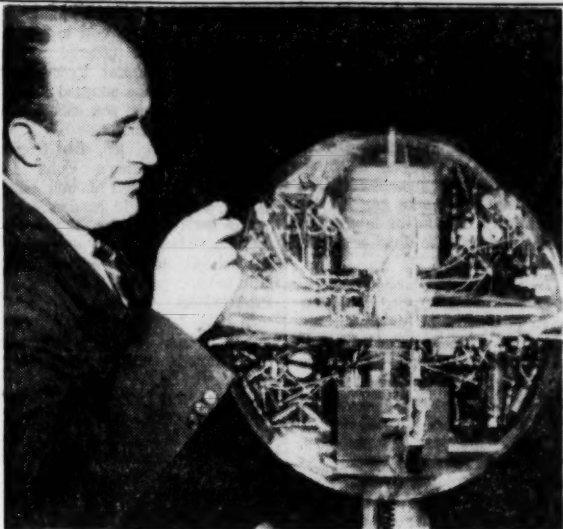

"When they left, the yard would be a mess. They would go into the smokehouse and take down our meat, cut out the best portions and throw the rest down. They just riddled our farm."

The family later moved to Kentucky and Mrs. Byrd now lives here with a daughter, Mrs. S. L. Craver.

"We go to church nearly every Sunday," Mrs. Byrd said. "Maybe that's why I've lived so long."

Since it was her birthday, the family prepared Mrs. Byrd's favorite dish—chicken and dumplings.

"Grab a couple of wings," she told a reporter by telephone, "and fly down here for some."

MODEL OF EARTH SATELLITE GOES ON DISPLAY
Herbert R. Pfister Looks Over Full-Scale Model of Satellite

Model of 1st Satellite Will Be Shown Today

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 — Starting at 2 p.m. tomorrow, the public will be able to get a look at what the first celestial body with the label "Made in U.S.A." may look like.

A model of a man-made earth satellite will go on display at the Hayden Planetarium. An earth satellite is scheduled to be launched between July 1957 and December 1958, by the United States as a contribution to the International Geophysical Year. Forty countries will participate in scientific observations in the geophysical year.

PRESENT AT PREVIEW

Today reporters and photographers were present at a preview of the model. On hand to explain it were Dr. Homer E. Newell Jr., superintendent of the Atmospheric and Astrophysics Division of the Upper Air Research Program for the U.S. Naval Research Laboratory, and Herbert R. Pfister, associate editor of "Popular Science Monthly," designed and built the model after consulting with scientists working on the satellite program.

What it boiled down to after the lecture and a question-and-answer period was:

A transparent plastic globe 18 inches in diameter and weighing 25 pounds. It sat on a pedestal simulating the concave nose of a third-stage rocket, which would give a real satellite its final punch.

ELECTRONIC PARTS

The model's vital organs consist of electronic parts representing equipment to record and transmit to the earth scientific data. For example, the satellite and its brothers or sisters—the gender of the satellite is still a mystery—would measure cosmic rays, solar ultraviolet light, electrical currents and the strength of the earth's magnetic field.

It was emphasized that the model was the physical representation of an "educated guess." Dr. Newell said it was "a reasonable facsimile" of what the real satellites may look like.

10 ARE PLANNED

Since the United States National Committee for the Geophysical Year plan to launch perhaps 10 satellites, it may turn out that some will be of different materials and shapes from others.

However, it is estimated that the satellites will be between 14 and 20 inches in diameter.

The baby moons will be launched by the Department of Defense, which is underwriting the logistical aspect of the operation.

Three-stage rockets, like monstrous basketball centers, will shoot the satellites at a speed of about 18,000 miles an hour. The goal is the upper atmosphere 200 to 300 miles from the earth. The satellites, it is hoped, will fall into elliptical orbit patterns. They would speed around the earth once every hour and a half, 16 times every 24 hours.

200 MILES UP

At a height of 200 miles it was estimated a satellite would stick to its track 15 to 30 days before it lost speed and plummeted back toward earth. As it broke into the denser air it would burn to nothing through friction.

The Glenn L. Martin Co. of Baltimore has been awarded a preliminary contract to make the satellite.

Earth-bound men may be able to see the baby moons at certain times of the day. They will shine, as does nature's own moon, with reflected light from the sun.

Some Misconceptions About Common Colds

Everyone complains that we lack knowledge about the common cold. It is said to be responsible for most absenteeism from work, school and military training. The majority of such statements center about a fallacy that needs correction.

The common cold is only one of a dozen or more nonbacterial infections involving the respiratory passageways. All have somewhat similar manifestations varying from the sniffles or a stuffy nose to a severe debilitating bronchitis or pneumonia. The causative organisms can be differentiated only in the laboratory and the tests take days or weeks to complete.

In other words, upper respiratory infections (U. R. I.) rather than colds are to blame for absenteeism. There would be less criticism along this line if we would call such virus attacks upper respiratory infections instead of colds.

During the last few decades, more and more micro-organisms have been isolated from the secretions of victims of U. R. I. With each discovery of this kind, a potential vaccine is in the making. The influenza vaccine was developed in this way. But the flu is only one type of upper respiratory infection and the vaccine will not protect against the common cold.

At present, there is no vaccine to guard against all respiratory infections. To do the job, it would have to contain protective antibodies against 10 to 20 different respiratory viruses. Such a vaccine is the hypothetical "cold vaccine" that everyone is clamoring for.

Some progress has been made, however. Dr. Robert J. Huebner and associates at the National Institute of Health, were able to isolate a number of viral agents from adenoid and tonsil tissues removed in surgery and from secretions of the throat and eyes obtained from persons with respiratory illnesses. The scientists refer to these viruses as adenoid-pharyngeal-conjunctival agents (APC viruses).

The calendar year which is now drawing to a close has been known in the British West Indies as "Jamaica 300," and has been devoted to an elaborate celebration of the 300th anniversary of the island's association with the British commonwealth. It was my pleasure to participate in a bridge tournament at Kingston as part of the festivities to commemorate the occasion.

Today's hand was culled from the team-of-four match in which the hosts registered an impressive win over the visiting Americans. The visitors were lucky to have picked up a profit on this deal.

The diagram sets forth the bidding put up by the Jamaicans. North was in a somewhat aggressive mood and contracted for slam himself though he could not with certainty account for combined assets of more than 32 points. A 100 point set was recorded.

At the other table, Margaret Wagar of Atlanta raised the opening two no trump bid to four no trump, but Robert McPherran of New York, in the South position, declined the invitation. Against the lead of the three of diamonds, McPherran managed to bring in 11 tricks for a score of 460 points.

In a jocular mood, he appeared to be contrite over not having gone on to slam. Considering the result Mrs. Wagar was a bit perplexed, but her partner insisted that after the opening lead, the hand makes six. South captures East's queen of diamonds, cashes the ace, king of hearts and runs off all the black cards. West throws a heart on the fourth club, as does the dummy. On the third and fourth spades, West has to part with two diamonds. Now South leads the nine of diamonds. West must play the 10 and dummy's jack forces East's king. The seven of diamonds provides declarer's 12th trick.

WORRY CLINIC

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Facts Are Necessary To Good Reasoning

Mrs. Newton P. Leonard, president of the National Congress of PTA, recently told her annual convention:

"Our children and young people," she began, "must be taught to value reason and they must be given opportunities to exercise that reason."

"The facts, whether they are about communism or sex, must not be concealed from our children or distorted."

Teachers, clergymen, physicians and judges in our juvenile courts will heartily applaud that splendid goal of the PTA.

The very same week in which Mrs. Leonard uttered that speech, the General Federation of Women's Clubs adopted a resolution approving sex education for school youngsters.

Please realize, too, that there are 15,500 women's clubs in America, composed of well educated, moral civic leaders.

The women's clubs, therefore, recommended such a course in the schools, to be credited as a unit toward graduation.

PROGRESS
In 1935, I launched this educational column to help disseminate similar helpful facts for happier living.

Since I was both a Ph.D. college teacher of psychology, as well as an M.D., I was the only columnist with such training who elected to shift from campus teaching to the vastly wider field of the "universities in print," namely, the American newspapers.

Being a Bible class teacher and father of five children myself, and having been invited scores of times by various church groups to conduct marriage clinics in their local churches, I thought it was high time to place my influence behind the building of happy homes, where divorce and juvenile delinquency could be whittled down.

So I became a "faculty" member of your newspaper, which is the most influential educational medium in your area, barring none.

For every literate American starts reading the newspaper at about the age of eight (comic pages), and after the average American quits school forever, as he does by 18, he relies mainly on the newspaper for the next 50 years.

So the newspaper exerts a tremendous social influence, as I have ample evidence to prove.

Oh, I got a few criticisms in 1935 about being "too frank."

AVERAGE AMERICAN
In the first 10 years, however, I received only 34 letters of criticism though this column was running from coast to coast. I had actually expected 5,000, as the minimum.

But I soon learned that the "average" American is 30 years old, married and with 2 children about ready for kindergarten.

He and his wife are out on the firing line of life. They bump into the "frank" problems that confront all of us.

"Mommy, where did I come from?" their children ask, and our schools had not taught Mommy what to say, so this column met that need 20 years before the PTA recommendation cited above or the women's clubs urged the same thing.

So your newspaper has long been "scooping" the church and the public school on really fulfilling Christ's admonition about giving people the more abundant life.

"The truth shall set ye free," stated Jesus, and in this column for a full 20 years we have been giving you vital psychological and medical truths to prevent delinquency and divorce, insanity and neurotic ailments.

U.S. Jet Bombers To Base in Japan

TOKYO, Dec. 19 (UP)—The U. S. Far East Air Forces announced today it would "soon" start basing twin-jet B57 bombers in Japan for the first time.

"Present plans call for the light bombers to leave the United States for Japan this month," the Air Force said. They will replace propeller-driven B36s.

A B57 can fly "over 1,000 miles and return to its departure base without landing," an Air Force announcement said—almost the 1,300 miles distance from Tokyo to Peiping.

State Orders Blood Lab To Close

By the Associated Press
The Georgia State Health Department Monday ordered Dr. Vosgan A. Avakian to close one of his two premarital blood testing laboratories in Rossville, a North Georgia mecca for Tennessee couples wanting to be married.

The other Avakian laboratory will be permitted to operate on a temporary permit until May 31. Dr. T. F. Sellars, state health director, acted following hearing on a citation for Dr. Avakian to show cause why his permits should not be revoked for falsifying records.

The charge was based on reports on tests of blood samples which the Health Department sends out monthly to check the approximately 90 blood testing laboratories in the state.

Dr. Avakian was ordered to close the Avakian laboratory in the Long Building on Dec. 31. He can continue his office there, but is to do no laboratory work at the location.

He will be permitted to make blood tests in the Rossville Laboratory under the five-month temporary approval.

There are three other laboratories in Rossville where couples can have the premarital blood tests required by Georgia law.

Gracewood Buildings Given Griffin Priority

Gov. Griffin Monday gave top priority on a tight state budget to new buildings for Gracewood Home for Mentally Defective Children.

At the same time, the governor warned all other state agencies—including the schools—to expect little or no budget increases in January.

State Welfare Director Alan Kemper asked Griffin Monday for one million dollars for Gracewood buildings.

"We've got to build a home for those children and I've got it right at the top of my list," the governor said.

State School Supt. M. D. Collins said Saturday he would ask the Legislature for an additional 38 million dollars for schools.

The governor wasn't receptive to this. He said: "It's laudable to ask, but if the money is not there, you can't spend it."

Griffin said he would implore the Legislature not to appropriate "a nickel more than anticipated revenue from current resources." The budget is expected to run approximately 277 million dollars.

City Proposal Eliminating Primary Vote Is Rejected

The Atlanta Executive Committee Monday night rejected a proposal which would have reduced the number of city elections and required nonpartisan campaigns.

They voted 6-5 against a recommendation by the legislative committee to request the Fulton County delegation to introduce such legislation.

"Local issues should be separated from state and national issues and candidates should be elected on the basis of the best man for the job regardless of party affiliation," the report said. Under the proposal a primary election could have been eliminated.

Parliamentarian A. T. Walden explained that in the eyes of the law, the committee is still a Democratic Party organization and the law would have to be changed if elections were to become legally nonpartisan.

Mrs. H. J. Toombs, chairman of the legislative committee, said elections have become nonpartisan in practice but the law needs clarification.

Opposed to the plan were E. Pierce, Sam Massell Jr., Sol P. Gregory Griggs, George B. Sawyer, Miles G. Amos, Walden, Lester L. Hardy and Maurice K. Lassetter. Voting yes were Carl W. Benamy, Charles V. Brownlee and Mrs. Toombs. Glenn H. Frick abstained. Several voting yes emphasized that they were Democrats.

The committee approved a plan to clarify terms of office of its members. It recommended a law be drawn making their own terms concurrent with the aldermanic board's.

Hugh C. Rowland of 1040 Boulevard Dr., SE, was approved unanimously to fill the unexpired term of the late Rufus Williams, second ward representative. Rowland was nominated by Sawyer, the other second ward member.

Health Hub Aid Bid Gets Fulton Okay

By RICHARD ASHWORTH

The Fulton County Health Dept. was authorized Monday to seek federal and state aid on a $420,000 three-story addition to its main health center at 210 Central Ave., Southwest.

The county commissioners authorized Dr. Roy W. McGee, county health commissioner, to make application to the State Health Dept. for Hill-Burton and state funds.

Dr. McGee said roughly $280,000 of the cost of the addition would come from federal and state sources with the remaining $140,000 to come from county bonds set aside for health center purposes.

The addition will provide additional space for dental services, maternal and well-baby clinics and will include quarters for the child guidance clinic, cardiac clinic, tuberculosis division and for a library.

In other actions, the commissioners called a public hearing for 2:30 p.m. Jan. 4 on the method by which the county proposes to assess for water mains to be laid in the county by the City of Atlanta at county expense.

The commissioners approved a contract with the city for the joint enterprise, setting out the basis on which the mains will be laid. It was sent to the Atlanta Board of Aldermen for approval.

The rates and assessing methods—which include a tap-on fee and assessment of main costs at a rate of $2 per front foot to property owners—will apply too two mains the commissioners already have approved for this year and to all others the county plans.

The commissioners have voted $192,520 for a 12-inch main along Roswell road and $133,950 for a 16-inch main along Welcome All road.

The water contract has been worked out in joint meetings of county and city officials.

The commissioners also called for bids Feb. 1 on construction of a control tower for the Fulton County Airport. The tower, including two stories and a "cab," will be built atop the present administration building.

The tower plan has been approved by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Reappointment of Charlie M. Brown and Walter R. Thomas to four-year terms on the Fulton-DeKalb Hospital Authority also was voted by the commissioners. The terms were due to expire Dec. 31.

County Atty. Harold Sheats announced that E. A. Wright, assistant county attorney for the past eight years, has resigned effective Dec. 31 to become judge of Fulton Civil Court. Sheats appointed Paul T. Anderson, Atlanta real estate lawyer, to replace Wright.

Anderson will take over duties of acquiring rights-of-way for expressways.

Fulton Fire Death Called Accidental

The death of Mrs. Betty Lee Dooley, 37, whose body was discovered in her home on Bachelor avenue, East Point, evidently resulted from burns accidentally inflicted, East Point police said Monday.

Police Chief W. H. Tyler said a coroner's inquest would probably be called in an effort to determine exactly how the clothing caught on fire. Tyler said a gas heater was going in the home and a quantity of matchsticks had been strewn about the floor.

The water had been turned on in the bathroom as if someone had attempted to douse the flames, Tyler said. The body, badly burned, was discovered Sunday on the dining room floor.

The chief said tests conducted by the state crime laboratory indicated the death was accidental.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday at Willingham Drive Baptist Church. The Rev. Tom Hughes will officiate. Burial will be in Hillcrest Cemetery.

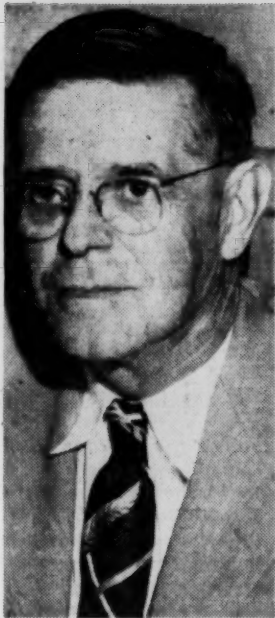

Survivors include her husband, Wade Dooley; a daughter, Mrs. T. M. Wood Jr. of Hapeville; parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Lowe of East Point; a sister, Mrs. J. L. Hall of East Point; four brothers, Billy C. Lowe, Clifton Lowe and Charles S. Lowe, all of East Point, and N. J. Lowe of Union City.

Redevelopment, Rehab Slate in Christmas Lag

Atlanta's projected multimillion-dollar redevelopment and rehabilitation slowed to a standstill Monday until after Christmas.

The program, calling for redevelopment of McDaniel and Buttermilk Bottom areas and the rehabilitation of a considerable sector in the vicinity of Negro colleges in southwest Atlanta, was referred Monday to the aldermanic board's redevelopment committee, headed by Ald. Hamilton Douglas Jr.

Douglas said his committee plans a meeting as early after Christmas as is practical.

Yule Tree Hunt Ends at Bottom Of Hidden Well; Hunter Bruised

The Butterworth brothers had their ups and downs Monday.

William "Bill" Butterworth, 15, and his brother Paul, 17, of 133 Spruell Springs Rd., NE, went Christmas tree hunting.

Walking through a wooded area along Riverside drive, near Abernathy road, they eyed tree after tree. One was too short. Another was too tall. Some looked pretty good—if they couldn't find a better one. Then, poof! Bill disappeared, just like that.

Paul discovered his brother had stepped into an abandoned well covered with a thick blanket of pine straw and leaves. The cover gave way, dumping Bill 25 feet down the hole.

Bill assured Paul he was all right, except for the fact that it was dark and there was no immediate prospect of getting out again. Paul comforted his brother.

Paul ran all the way to the Sandy Springs fire station. He asked firemen to bring a ladder. They did. Ptl. M. L. Barnes and H. M. Self went along, too.

When they arrived at the scene, they discovered Bill shaken and bruised, but safely topside.

He'd discovered steps dug into one side of the well. By placing his back against one side and his feet the other, he'd been able to inch his way upward and out.

Brought to Grady Hospital by officers Barnes and Self, he was treated for bruises to the head and face and for back injuries.

The well was located at an old homestead, abandoned so long that it was overgrown with underbrush, officers said. They added the property owner agreed to cover the well with substantial planking or fill it up.

The copy, received by the clerk of U.S. District Court, required some 42 days to reach Atlanta through legal channels.

Court officials said the ruling will not become effective until acted upon by U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan. Judge Sloan, currently holding court in Gainesville, is expected to return here Jan. 3.

The copy, received by the clerk of U.S. District Court, required some 42 days to reach Atlanta through legal channels.

Court officials said the ruling will not become effective until acted upon by U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan. Judge Sloan, currently holding court in Gainesville, is expected to return here Jan. 3.

Mayor Hartsfield Monday declined comment regarding receipt here of a certified copy of the U.S. Supreme Court decision banning segregation on city golf courses.

He'd discovered steps dug into one side of the well. By placing his back against one side and his feet the other, he'd been able to inch his way upward and out.

Brought to Grady Hospital by officers Barnes and Self, he was treated for bruises to the head and face and for back injuries.

The well was located at an old homestead, abandoned so long that it was overgrown with underbrush, officers said. They added the property owner agreed to cover the well with substantial planking or fill it up.

Celestine Sibley So Hallow'd Is the Time

Christmas can come now. The school play has been held. Angels in bed sheets and tinsel halos . . . shepherds in their papas' bathrobes . . . sweet treble voices singing the loveliest of Christmas songs, "Silent Night, Holy Night."

It's the same, or very nearly the same, at schools throughout the land . . . and it has been for as long as I can remember. Somehow you like to think of schools in Iowa and Vermont, Illinois and Georgia having Christmas "exercises" and parents going to sit in draughty halls or over-heated auditoriums to re-experience again the changeless magic of childhood's Christmas.

It's a good way to set the mood for Christmas week. After I had been to see my own youngest wearing old blue curtains and an expression of unaccustomed sweetness and serenity for her role as the Madonna, I knew none of the confusion or commercialism or busy-ness of the holidays would get me. The front row kindergarten angel with the missing tooth had an expression of such purity, such reverence . . . oh, me, it's what Christmas is about, isn't it?

The Christmas play sets off a chain of happy things, I've noticed every year. This year at Spring Street School they had a French Christmas program directed and produced by Mrs. Glenn Rainey, who is both the French teacher and a seventh grade mother. Songs and dialogue were in French and so were some of the scenic effects. Toward the end of the program a touching note on the universality of Christmas was struck by Mrs. Willard Dillard's fifth grade.

Led by one of their classmates, German-born Renate Holman, they sang "Silent Night, Holy Night" in German. Maybe you wouldn't have come back to town red-eyed from tears of emotion—but I saw some pretty cool grownups who did.

Then I heard another thing I like to think about. There's a little girl at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Cancer Home on Washington street who has been there since babyhood with a particularly terrible kind of cancer. The other day she had a day to celebrate—her birthday or her saint's day—and a visitor found her in the hall dressed in the complete habit of a nun, veil and cowl and voluminous black skirts—all little girl size.

The good sisters who work so hard day and night in their fight against pain and death still had time to help a little girl play "dress up!"

There was another good thing in the mail—a Christmas card with a quotation from Hamlet I never saw on a Christmas card before. Unless you've been sitting up late with Shakespeare lately you might miss it, so here it is:

"Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawn singeth all night long;
And then, they say, no spirit can walk abroad:
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm;
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time."

As if that weren't enough Christmas spirit lifting in one day, on the way to lunch I heard a horn honking and looked up to get a hand wave and a "Merry Christmas" from the driver of the bright red police patrol!

Princess Says Old South Like Russia She Knew

By BETTY CARROLLTON

A royal visitor to Atlanta isn't ready to settle down to a quiet life in the country—even after experiencing the tragedy of three wars.

Madame Marie Bounhoff of Kelowna, British Columbia, the former Princess Marie Orbelliani of Russia, is visiting Atlanta and the United States for the first time.

Madame Bounhoff, guest of Dr. and Mrs. Hal Davison, recalled the wartime experiences which have affected her life since childhood. She survived the Russian revolution and both world wars.

As a member of the royal family of the Russian province of Georgia, Madame Bounhoff compared her early life with that of the South prior to the War Between the States.

"GONE WITH THE WIND"
Madame Bounhoff read "Gone With the Wind" as soon as it was published and later saw the movie.

"I probably know that book as well as any of the native Atlantans," she said.

"The life here before your War Between the States," she continued, "must have been much like ours. We had huge properties, a lot of land. I remember we had 150 horses on our farm. There were, of course, many servants. The conditions in my homeland then were much like the plantation life of the Old South in the United States."

But came the revolution, which "was terrible but it had to be."

LUXURY ENDED
Her life of luxury ended.

Princess Marie Orbelliani left Russia in 1916 to live in England. She met and married the late Dr. Nicholas Bounhoff.

But she had not escaped the grim spectre of war.

The Bounhoffs lived in Belgium for many years, where Dr. Bounhoff was professor at the University of Louvain until his death during World War II.

Madame Bounhoff lived with fear during the bombardment of Belgium, when she lost all her personal possessions.

Her home, hit first by the Nazis, then by the Allies, became a shell of its former grace and style.

"Three hours before the Allies entered the city," she recalled, "the Germans blew up the bridges all around us. I spent the whole winter in a house with no roof, no doors and no windows. We stuffed everything—sheets, newspapers, wrappings—into the openings in an effort to keep out the bitter cold."

FOOD SCARCE
Food was, of course, very hard to get, and Madame Bounhoff and her neighbors often suffered from hunger.

"But everyone was wonderful," she said. "We all worked together to salvage what we could of a good life. They are a very determined, hard-working people, quite thrifty and quick to recover."

"But Europe has suffered

Tobe Says The Linen Look Is in Silk, Too

In my long career in the fashion business, I've learned that once a fashion is well established it influences everything else around it. Take the case of linen, for instance, which is top fashion for casual Southern clothes:

It's such an important fashion, as a matter of fact, that it has given rise to a similar fabric fashion of equal stature—linen-weave silks—that is undoubtedly the key fabric of the year. It has the requisite body for the undoubtedly prevailing slim silhouette:

By some magic it manages to need less pressing than most other fabrics, thereby making it wonderful for travel.

Men discovered it several years ago. Why not follow their lead?

Billy Mercer, Jeanette Hall To Be Married

DUBLIN, Dec. 19 — Mrs. M. L. Hall announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jeanette Charlotte Hall, to Billy Roy Mercer, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Mercer.

The marriage will be solemnized on Dec. 28 at the Jefferson Street Baptist Church, with the Rev. F. E. Singleton officiating.

The two had not seen each other since their London days until Madame Bounhoff's arrival here.

She plans to remain in Atlanta until February.

Santa Has a New Miracle Fabric To Delight Little Ladies, Mothers

By MARY GRAY ANDERSON

Every lady, no matter what her age, is delighted to see her wardrobe grow at Christmas.

Here are some tips for Saint Nicholas about gifts that any miss from kindergarten through the teens would like to find under her tree—clothes she would love because they are fashion fresh as next spring; clothes that mother would love because of their easy-to-care-for features.

All-the-rage with the little miss are felt circular skirts, like the one modeled by Sarah Minnick. The full, firm-textured skirt stands out like a ballerina's tutu. The colors are clear and bright, and the colorful motifs are fun to see.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

The one Sarah is wearing is called merry-go-round, with cut-out horses prancing across the front of the skirt. The horses have color and rhinestone accents. Black velvet ribbon gives further color accent. Other motifs available on felt skirts are cats and poodles. Sarah is wearing a pretty ruffled nylon blouse with her skirt.

Older girls will be pleased with the more sophisticated prints in new skirts made of lilion. This new fabric is not only pretty, but very practical. Lilion is non-woven, and has one-sixth the weight of a woven material of similar fullness.

It will be wonderful for spring and summer because it has half the weight of broadcloth, and permits four times as much cooling air passage as even a light-weight summer cotton.

NO IRONING

The fabric has lasting crease-and-crush-resistance and such great shape-retaining ability that ironing is unnecessary under any conditions of wear and travel. It is also hand-washable, shrink-resistant and quick-drying.

Betsy Tant wears the skirt in a marble print with a hand-washable worsted jersey sweater that comes with its own little collar pin. It makes a handsome outfit for school or dating.

If the little lady likes pretty nighties, she can certainly get her wish this Christmas. Lucy Reinhardt models a blue nylon net gown and negligee ensemble. The gown of this trilly trio has ruffled straps and elasticized waist. The negligee is trimmed with ruffles and has push-up puff sleeves.

FUN PRINTS

Other sleep-and-lounge fashions for Santa to bring her are three-quarter quilted robes in fun prints. Some have matching slippers. Then, there are the old favorites with the young crowd—flannel baby doll pajamas of matching panty and shirt, and the colorful shorty night shirt.

HAPPY FACES REFLECT JOY OF CHRISTMAS
There's Something Special About Young Carolers

Marcia Winn Children Remember Glory of Christmas

The two 6 year olds on their way to a children's party were discussing Christmas.

The little boy's face was shining as he said that seven days before Christmas he and his big brother arrange the creche on their mother's desk, six days before Christmas decorate the house with evergreens, and five days before Christmas help select their tree.

The little girl listened raptly, and when the other paused for breath told in a surge of words about the carols her family sings, the angel who looks like Queen Victoria as a baby, the little fairy boat that sails toward the angel, the musical creche that plays "Silent Night," and the living Christmas tree.

GIFTS NOT MENTIONED
Not once did these perfectly normal children mention Santa Claus, gifts, or what they wanted for Christmas.

Each was talking of the Christmas he remembered, of its continuity, its cherished traditions. The Christmas each remembered was the Christmas each wanted.

Listening, I began to pity the children of families who, professing to "get tired of it all," decide to serve up Christmas in a novel, dashing fashion, sophisticate it, and thus lose both Christmas and themselves and rob their children of their heritage.

What does one retain from one's childhood Christmases?

Peering back through the decades, I emerged with fragments there. The little brother whose beautiful hair was, greatly against his wishes, permitted to grow shoulder length so he could portray the Christ Child in the temple in the church pageant; the big brother who stamped up the aisle as one of the Three Kings, his voice breaking as he sang of his gift; the joy of being an angel in the heavenly host; the busy air at home on Christmas eve; the tempting packages under the glistening tree; the approach of the mysterious night; being grown up enough to go to the midnight service at church, and emerging with a head full of song into a night studded with stars.

HAPPY FEELING

To tell the truth, I remember little about Christmas presents, when or how the belief in Santa Claus faded away, or what we ate for dinner. I remember primarily the tremendous feeling of happiness that affected the entire household. At Christmas we all felt renewed and sustained.

Remembering, I hoped that this in similar degree is what all children will remember. That they feel it is clear. Look at the faces of the small Christmas carolers. Look at the face of your own child as he sings a Christmas carol.

How breathtakingly beautiful he suddenly is! His eyes are moist with wonder, softness, yearning, and tremendous love.

In his essential purity of heart, a purity the rest of us strive the rest of our lives to recapture, he clings fast to the Christmas story and the simple truths it presents.

Baby Care Classes Set By Red Cross

Prospective mothers can learn how to bathe and handle new babies in three Red Cross mother and baby care courses scheduled for early January at Atlanta Red Cross headquarters.

Lectures and films will teach them about normal pregnancy, preparation for baby's birth and their own emotional health, Mrs. Frank L. Picotte, chairman of nursing services, said.

Cotton Gains, Then Falters

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (AP)—Cotton futures faltered today after establishing gains of as much as 85 cents a bale. Prices backed away from the day's best levels as commission house and New Orleans selling, coupled with small hedging, met only limited trade buying. Final prices were 30 cents a bale higher to 80 cents lower.

Quiet conditions in the cotton textile and spot cotton markets restricted interest in futures. Uncertainty over Washington cotton moves depressed distant months. A leading spot firm said inquiries for spot cotton were more numerous in the Atlanta area during the past week but very few sales were made. It was felt that mills will do little until after the holidays.

Formosa bought 15,600 bales of U.S. short staple cotton last week. Other export markets were dormant.

Adm. Peary's Widow Dies In 93rd Year

PORTLAND, Maine, Dec. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Josephine Diebitsch Peary, 92, widow of the American naval officer who discovered the North Pole in 1909, and an arctic explorer in her own right, died today.

Mrs. Peary had been confined to her apartment since she suffered a broken hip in January, 1954.

Adm. Robert W. Peary gave her much credit for the success of his arctic expeditions. She accompanied her husband on several trips, traveling farther north over the ice fields than any other white woman.

A charter member of the National Geographic Society, Mrs. Peary was awarded a Gold Medal of Achievement especially struck for her at a meeting last May.

Mrs. Peary was also a charter member of the Philadelphia Geographic Society, and Appalachian Mountain Club, and an honorary member of a woman geographers' club.

NAVAL ENGINEER
She was born in Washington, the daughter of Smithsonian Institution Prof. Herman H. Diebitsch. She met Peary when he first was gaining recognition as a naval engineer and they married in 1888.

On arctic trips, Mrs. Peary became an able hunter and her needle kept the explorers supplied with clothes patterned after native costumes.

Mrs. Peary was the mother of two arctic adventurers.

NORTHERN TRIPS
Mrs. Peary, now Mrs. Marie Ahlgrin Peary Stafford of Portland, made several northern trips with her parents, and wrote a book about her life among the Eskimos. She was born near Thule, Greenland, at her father's winter base.

Robert E. Peary Jr. is now a Brunswick, Maine, construction engineer.

Wrapping Yule Gifts Knot Too Difficult

By MARJORY SMITH

ANYBODY CAN TIE a perfect Christmas bow.

"Just don't stint on the ribbon, keep the satin side up, and take your time on those loops," advises cute Carlene Smith of 198 Holtzclaw St., SE, who Christmas-wraps dozens of packages every day for a downtown department store.

Carlene Smith

Carlene found it was "easy as pie" to learn to make all sorts of elaborate wrappings involving gilt applique, sequins, and pasted-on Santa Clauses complete with cotton beards. But butter-fingered folks anxious about their home-made Yule packages are always begging her to tell them how to tie a "fool-proof bow."

A yard of gay Christmas ribbon and some Scotch tape is all you need, Carlene reports. For a "flat figure 8 bow," take end of the ribbon between thumb and finger and loop back and forth. Ditto for a "fluffy bow" — but each time you loop, pinch the ribbon tightly. Fasten in the middle with tape or, if you prefer, wire. Tie onto your package. That's all there is to it.

TINY YULE TREE, brilliantly bedecked with Tom Thumb-size ornaments, twinkling from rear window of Lincoln Capri moving down Spring street.

KIDS KNOW A BARGAIN better than their elders, local Eastern Air Lines officials have concluded. Atlanta adults last week generally turned up their noses at EAL's Silver Dollar Sale, in which (to promote 25th anniversary of passenger service) the air line offered one dollar for 93 cents. But Riverside Academy turned out for the holidays and young enders mobbed the place, cleaning out Eastern in 20 minutes. Silver dollars are gone and the sale is over.

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery

Finds Healing Substance That Does Both—Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne*)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H.* Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Crisis Fund Meet Called For Fulton School Board

A special meeting has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Wednesday by the Fulton County Board of Education to discuss the "emergency financial situation" facing the county school system in the 1956-57 school year.

Paul D. West, school superintendent and board secretary, said the meeting was called by W. L. Robinson, board president, as a result of a meeting school officials had Friday with the county's legislative delegation.

During that meeting Robinson urged the delegation to introduce legislation to reinstate a $300,000 appropriation which the system now gets from the county under a law due to expire Dec. 31.

School officials have suggested in the past that the only way the system could have sufficient operating funds would be to continue the appropriation, remove or lower homestead exemptions on school taxes in the county and to raise or remove the ceiling from the present 15-mill levy for school taxes.

West declared that board action on the financial situation "cannot be delayed because school funds for the 1956-57 school year are those collected on the basis of the 1956 tax digest."

The school board has been told by an auditor that the 1956 tax digest, combined with the use of 50 per cent of property valuations as a basis for county taxes, would not produce sufficient funds for the system to keep up
